Corn Growers Need To Counter Big Oil, Get Ethanol Use Act Passed

ANDY ANDREWS

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The corn industry stands to benefit in a big way if President Clinton's Clean Air Act finally passes.

"This is going to happen unless 'big oil' (companies) can convince the EPA and the (Clinton) Administration that we can't meet the requirements that are in the proposed rule," said Mike Wagner, executive director of the Ohio Corn Growers Association.

Wagner spoke to about 200 corn growers and industry representatives about the many uses of corn in a wide array of environmentally friendly products, including ethanol, last week at the annual Pennsylvania Corn Conference.

According to Wagner, growers should continue to urge their senators and representatives to support the proposed rule, which will mandate use of ethanol in fuel oil to the annual tune of 500-600 billion gallons, equivalent to more than 200 bushels of corn.

He said that lobbyists from the major oil companies have testified against corn growers. In recent testimony before committee, Wagner said big oil was claiming that growers "are making too much money. Corn's at a five-year high. They say that we're the worst polluters in the world. That all you do is raise more corn, pollute more air, pollute more water. They name you by names."

In reality, according to the Ohio Corn Growers Association director, big oil didn't mention they were getting $6 billion a year in subsidies, and have received, since about 1916, about $123 billion in subsidies, while corn growers get under a half billion dollars a year. "They don't rry to tell the press and the people that."

Also, oil is imported at a rate that is startling. "We have a national debt probably because we're spending $150 million a day for foreign oil," he said.

Corn growers could see the floor price of their product drop anywhere from a nickel to 20 cents if the act isn't passed, according to Wagner. In Ohio, where a statewide ethanol fuel oil blend program is in effect, ethanol use is up to about 15.5 million gallons a month, "more than any state in the

BST Sales Strong, FDA Warns Against Labeling

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The controversy over Monsanto Corp.'s synthetic bovine somatotropin (BST) product called Posilac is apparently wanning, especially in light of a warning by the federal Food and Drug Administration that false labeling will. not be tolerated.

Posilac, the first biotechnology product created through "genetic farming" was approved for use in food production late last year by the FDA, with a moratorium for sales until Feb. 3.

Though not necessarily an industry term, "genetic farming" refers to the technique of taking genetic material responsible for making a certain substance, attatching it to the genetic material of a harmless bacteria, and growing the resulting bacteria in order to harvest the desired substance in bulk.

It is a process used to manufacture insulin for treating diabetics and it is also the process used primarily to manufacture BST.

During the sales moratorium, Monsanto operated a 24-hour, seven-day per week, toll-free telephone, Posilac-information service, but was prohibited from taking any orders for the product.

The company waited a day after the moratorium expiration, and on Friday, Feb. 4, the company began sales.

Two days later, as of Feb. 6, Sunday night, there were 2,000 orders placed from across the nation, ranging in dose amounts of 50 to 5,000, according to regional company representative Dan Gard.

The threat of consumer rejection, especially that caused by fears spread through professional protesters, such as Jeremy Rifkin, is apparently not as strong as it had been because of a more recent action taken by the FDA.

According to a New York Times article published Tuesday, those opponents of BST who seek to persuade producers from not using the product through the intimidation of a threat of labeling were delivered a serious blow by the FDA.

According to the arcticle, FDA on Monday "warned dairy producers and distributors ... not to mislead consumers with labels on milk and other dairy products that improperly refer to" Posilac or BST.

The FDA effectively said that it is illegal to advertise falsely and that "BST-free" is not true because all milk contains BST; that states should monitor and prevent such false labeling of dairy products; and that if milk is to be sold as being from cows not treated with Posilac, then an accurate record keeping system for each cow — following the flow of milk from individual cow to consumer —

Sign Up For Youth Contest At Pork Congress

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — For more than 15 years, the Keystone Pork Congress youth public speaking event has become a cornerstone of youth competition in the swine industry.

Up until about seven years ago or so, it has stood alone as part of the activities of the 16th annual Congress, scheduled this year on Wednesday, Feb. 16 at the Penn Harris Inn in Camp Hill.

In the years since, the contest has had strong competition from the annual Pork Bowl, held at the same time. While attendance has been split between two events, those who attend the Congress may want to listen to what some of the youth are saying regarding pigs and the environment, animal rights/welfare, and the future of the industry.

You could learn a lot, according

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The three-day annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association was highlighted with an awards banquet Wednesday evening. Each of the regions presented their award winners in community service, outstanding young farmer over 30, and under 30. State winners were named from each of these regional division winners.

Glenn and Barbara Snyder, Gettysburg, were named state winners of the Outstanding Community Service Award. Glenn and Barbara own two farms, one that has been in the family for over 100 years. They have three children and seven grandchildren. Their crop and livestock enterprise is well-managed, but they have time to help others. Barbara sings in the church choir and is the organist. Glenn has won many awards and is a past state Young Farmer President and serves Mt. Joy Township as a supervisor. They have been active in the Farm/City Week activities in Adams County.

NY Phila Frozen Eggs

EDISON, NJ

FEBRUARY 08, 1994

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, FEBRUARY 08, 1994. FEDERAL-STATE

Prices continued their upward trend. Trading was limited as higher values on finished product had buyers generally await further market developments prior to making any committments. Raw materials were held with confidence and several further processors opted to work reduced schedules rather than build higher priced inventories. Floor stocks were sufficient to handle present trade needs.

Northeast Broiler/Fryer Report

Wednesday, February 9, 1994

Buying interest was very light due in part to adverse weather throughout the area. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts with tenders were in fairly good balance and traded at the 1.85 level; product without tenders was fully adequate and traded mostly at 1.80. Some heavier boneless skinless was available at lower prices and slow to clear. Line run breasts were in close balance but most buyers were quite selective and current offerings were slow to clear. Some buyers could use product for late week. Dark meat items were well cleared at current prices. Wings continued in close balance but trading was at unchanged prices.

PRICES PAID PER POUND, ICE PACKED AND CO2 PACKED BROILER/FRYER PARTS, DELIVERED TO FIRST RECEIVERS IN POOL TRUCKLOT AND TRUCKLOT QUANTITIES. DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY GRAIN AND SOYBEAN PRICES MOVED MODERATELY TO SHARPLY HIGHER, WEDNESDAY. WINTRY, COLD WEATHER IN MIDWEST AREAS INCREASED LIVESTOCK FEED USAGE, BOOSTED WINTER WHEAT KILL CONCERNS AND CAUSED TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS DUE TO ICY CONDITIONS. WHEAT 3 TO 12 CENTS HIGHER. CORN 3 TO 7 CENTS HIGHER. SORGHUM 5 TO 8 CENTS HIGHER. SOYBEANS 4 TO 8 CENTS HIGHER. WHEAT PRICES GAINED MOMENTUM ON COMMISSION HOUSE BUYING. SHARPLY HIGHER CORN AND BEAN PRICES REFLECTED LIGHT FARMER SELLING. COLD, WINTER WEATHER CONTINUED IN MIDWEST AREAS FORCING LIVESTOCK REQUIREMENTS TO INCREASE AND HAMPERED MOVEMENT OF GRAINS.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

FEBRUARY 14-20, 1994

SHROVE TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 15.

THE GREAT PANCAKE RACE

Pancakes have been the traditional feast on Shrove Tuesday in Britain, Germany, and Scandinavia since the thirteenth century The bell calling the penitent to church actually became known as the pancake bell According to legend, in 1445 in Olney, England, a harried housewife raced off to church still clutching her frying pan complete with cakes! Every year since, the Pancake Race has been held in Olney on Shrove Tuesday Townswomen over 16 years old, clad in aprons and head scarves, race from the marketplace to the church (415 yards), flipping the pancakes three times en route In 1949, women Jaycees in Liberal, Kansas, staged a similar event, and these two unlikely sister cities continue this pre-Lenten tradition to the present

But hark, I hear the pancake bell / And fritters make a gallant smell. — Poor Robin's Almanac, 1684

OPINION

Talk About Horror Stories

In a recent advertisement, Mobil Oil severely criticized the EPA and the Clinton Administration for working to replace imported oil with renewable fuels like ethanol. They referred to ethanol as a "horror story that won't go away".

It's time to talk frankly about the horror stories created by "big oil". The largest transfer of wealth in the history of the United States is a result of the importation of crude oil. Since 1916 over $123 billion dollars in federal subsidies, paid by the taxpayer, have been doled out to the oil industry, much of which has landed in Middle Eastern Countries, and Mobil Oil has always found a place at the trough. Why in 1993 alone, taxpayers shelled out over $6 billion in oil industry subsidies. Now that's what we call a horror story!

The United States now imports nearly 50 percent of our oil needs, and that figure is expected to grow much higher by the turn of the century. Ethanol is the only domestically produced, clean burning, renewable liquid fuel this country has. We are not surprised that Mobil is upset about the advance of ethanol, after all it reduces the amount of imported crude oil they can process. In 1993, over $10 billion were generated in the U.S. through the production of domestic ethanol. These dollars stay at home and bolster the economy of rural America.

Ethanol made from grain and other renewable resources is clean burning. Gasoline, which contains high levels of benezene (a known carcinogen), zylene (highly reactive in the formation of urban smog), and other toxic chemicals is being breathed in and handled by consumers every day. Pollution caused by the burning of this dirty gasoline causes millions of dollars annually in increased health care requirements for people living in major cities. What Mobil Oil fails to mention is that cleaner burning renewable fuels are not the culprit. In fact, if it were not for the need to replace dirty gasoline, this entire matter would be a moot point.

The Clinton Administration and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency have recognized the need to embark on a program to replace dirty, imported gasoline with cleaner burning renewable fuels like ethanol. Yet Mobil Oil seems to still be living in the dark ages, hoping against hope that renewable fuels like ethanol will fade away into oblivion and they can proceed, without restriction, until the last drop of oil is sucked from the earth. That's a horror story!

Recent estimates have concluded that the real cost of imported oil is in excess of $70 a barrel. What the consumer pays at the pump and what we pay in taxes to protect shipping lanes and oil rich Middle Eastern countries is part of the "true cost" of that barrel of oil. The $15 a barrel oil mentioned in the ad is typical of the exaggerations and misrepresentations created to deceive the American public.

We are surprised and disappointed that a company like Mobil Oil would be so intimidated by a small fledgling ethanol industry that they would spend investors' money to discredit it. In fact, we are surprised that a company like Mobil Oil, who does substantial business in rural America, would slap the face of their customers.

While most of us were taught to turn the other cheek, it's time that rural America slaps back by exercising its right to decide where to purchase their petroleum products. Losing the business of rural America... now that could be a real horror story! -- Guest editorial by Mike Bryan, National Corn Growers Assn.

To Dispose Of Dead Animals

Recently the press covered a story on hundreds of dead ducks and geese found on a farm.

The ducks and geese died from the extreme cold weather we had recently. Instead of gathering up the dead fowl and disposing of them properly, the farmer left them lie on the ground.

As a result, neighbors filed a complaint and the farmer was arrested for cruelty to animals.

This could have been avoided by quick and proper dead animal disposal. Unfortunately this is not an isolated incidence. Our office receives several complaints every year about improper dead animal disposal.

Animals will die and occasionally we will experience a large death loss due to weather, fire, or mechanical failure. The key is to dispose of dead animals and birds quickly and in a satisfactory manner.

Farmers may send the animals to a rendering facility or bury, incinerate, or compost them.

Be a good neighbor and farmer and dispose of your dead animals properly.

To Attend A Satellite Conference

More and more county extension offices and farmers are purchasing satellite dishes.

This technology is generating many exciting educational programs from the land grant universities. From undergraduate courses in marketing, animal science and agricultural economics to seminars on dairy nutrition, corn production and swine husbandry to programs on outlook and conservation farming, the satellite is brining the world into our meeting rooms.

We now have access to the agricultural leaders across the United States. If you are looking for the latest information and seeing outstanding demonstrations that would be hard to duplicate locally, than plan to participate in a satellite conference.

The many farmers who have attended a conference have been pleased with the quality of the presentations and the excellent information presented.

To Look At Farm Numbers

According to United States Department of Agriculture projections, the number of U.S. farms will likely decline by only 15,000 per year in the next decade compared with the rate of over 100,000 annually a few decades ago.

States west of the Mississippi River will experience little change in farm numbers. Southern and northeastern states will lose farms the fastest — one to two percent a year.

These regions have the greatest imbalance between older and younger farmers.

Farm consolidation will continue at a moderate rate and decline less than one percent a year in the Corn Belt and Lake States regions. The coming decade will see a slow evolution toward fewer, larger commercial farms with closer ties to agribusinesses and a growing number of small, part-time, and specialty farms.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "In the end, the only people who fail are those who do not try."

HOW'S YOUR PERCEPTION?
February 13, 1994

Background Scripture:
Luke 20: 1-19
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 21:23-27,38-46

I find wryly amusing Luke's restrained observation that the scribes and pharisees "perceived that he had told this parable against them" (20:19).

The "parable" — actually more an allegory — refers to the so-called "Parable of the Vineyard," Luke 20:9-18. The reason I find Luke's comment amusing is that it doesn't take a Bible scholar or even a trained mind to perceive that the scribes and pharisees are, without any doubt, the targets of the parable.

Some of Jesus' parables are difficult to understand, but not this one. The "owner" of the vineyard is obviously God. The rebellious "tenants" are the religious leaders of Israel and the "servants" represent the Old Testament prophets. The "beloved son" or "heir" is Jesus Christ and when he is "killed", the reference is to the crucifixion of Christ. When Luke says, "He will come and destroy those tenants," he is speaking of judgement and the advent of the kingdom of God. The "others" to which he will give the vineyard then are presumably the Christians of the early church.

"THEY PERCEIVED"

One wonders why the scribes and pharisees waited until the end of the parable, before they protested: "God forbid!" Didn't they perceive that this story was a condemnation of them and all that they represented? How could they stand there and permit him to draw such an unflattering — if accurate — picture of themselves?

But if the scribes and pharisees were slow to perceive the meaning of this parable, so, perhaps, are we. When Jesus uttered these words, he was obviously thinking of the scribes and pharisees. But when we read this parable today, he speaks to a new, if somewhat similar, audience. God is still the owner of the vineyard, the Lord of the universe. The servants are still prophetic voices whom God sends to his tenants and the beloved son is still our Lord Jesus Christ. The coming of the owner to "destroy those tenants" is still the coming of God's kingdom to which, in one form or another, Christians still subscribe today.

THE "TENANTS" TODAY

All the elements in the parable have remained the same, except two. The first of these is the "tenants", for today they are us, those of us who have embraced Christianity's heritage of almost 2,000 years. We are the ones today who live and work in the owner's vineyard, God's creation. Is it possible that some of the original tenants' arrogant rebelliousness is evident in us? Could we be the ones who, blessed with the heritage of the Old and New Testaments, nevertheless remain resistant and hostile to God's messengers? And could it be that, even while professing the Christ in our churches, in our daily lives we reject God's Son and crucify again and again? Further, is the coming of God's kingdom thus a potential danger rather than a blessing for those of us who think we're among God's chosen?

That leaves the "others" to whom the owner will give the vineyard. I'm not sure who they represent. Perhaps these are people who follow Christ without benefit of Christian clergy or churches. I'm not concerned about the "others", but about us, the "tenants" in the "vineyard", those of us who with centuries of Christian history behind us still may not be getting the message.

That's my perception. What's yours?

Chester County 4-H Center Dairy Sale

Chester County dairy farmers are having a sale of donated dairy animals to fund the development of a 4-H Center that will support youth programs in the county. This sale is one of many contributors to the fund raising effort. The sale will be on Saturday, April 2, at the Solanco Fairgrounds, Quarryville, PA. Currently the committee is contacting dairy farmers for sale animals. If you are interested in supporting this worthy cause and have not been personally contacted, call the co-chairpersons: John St. John, 868-8745 or Mildred Seeds, 269-0759. Next month's column will have more information on the event.

GLENN'S UDDERINGS

By
Glenn A. Shirk

Lancaster Extension
Dairy Agent

(Article two of a two-part series)

In the first article, I discussed the challenge of keeping high-producing cows in proper flesh, getting them bred back, and keeping them healthy enough to stay in the herd a few years so they will have an opportunity to reward you with some valuable offspring, a little satisfaction and some profits. It's hard to do this without good dry matter intakes.

Dry Matter Intake

Top managers feed cows all they will eat, and many of them continually entice cows to eat more than what they actually want. They offer their cows high quality rations that are palatable and packed full of nutrients. They manage their herd and their feeding program in a manner that promotes good rumen function, a lot of cud chewing activity, and a healthy gut, all of which maximizes digestibility of feeds and absorption of nutrients.

Many things affect dry matter intake, nutrient intake and nutrient absorption. Let's look at a few of them.

1. Gut Capacity. This is something you don't wait until calving time to develop. Heifers that are well grown out and calve at a weight of about 1,300 pounds (large dairy breeds) have fewer difficulties at calving time and begin their lactations with more aggressive appetites and a greater capacity to consume feed.

Once these larger heifers are in milk, fewer nutrients are needed for growth. More are available for production and restoration of flesh, the result being better conceptions and heifers that are in better flesh and are better able to begin their second lactation with a running start.

As you push for rapid growth and development of heifers, be careful not to get them too fat. Getting young calves too fat can impair udder development and start foundering them at a very young age. These problems can remain with them for life.

Bred heifers can and should carry a little more flesh, but try to keep them below a body condition score of about 3.75. Fat heifers are more sluggish and they have a lower immune response. Their conception rates are poorer, they have more difficulty at calving time, and they can have sluggish appetites.

Heifer and dry cow programs that focus on developing capacious, well-functioning rumens is helpful too. That's why many producers and nutritionists prefer to feed drier, longer-stemmed, medium-quality, grassy forages over a lot of grain and corn silage or finely chopped haylages.

2. Pre-Calving Care. The 2- to 3-week period prior to calving is a good time to increase grain feeding rates. This stimulates the gut wall to develop more papilla (finger like projections that grow out from the gut wall).

The more papilla there are and the longer they are, the greater the amount of surface area that is available to absorb nutrients from the digestive system.

The goal is to get these papilla developed before calving so they are ready to function at time of calving and in early lactation, when the need for nutrients is greatest.

This is also a good time to gradually acclimate cows and heifers, as well as their rumen microflora, to feeds that will be fed in early lactation.

3. Ration Density. A few days after calving, start increasing

AJCC Names Treasurer

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Vickie J. White has been named treasurer of The American Jersey Cattle Club which is headquartered in Reynoldsburg, Ohio.

White succeeds Calvin Covington, who was named executive secretary and chief executive officer of the Jersey organizations in early December.

White's entire professional career has been developed as an employee of the Jersey organizations.

While attending Franklin University, Columbus, Ohio, she worked parttime in various departments. After graduating in 1982 with an associate degree in business administration, White was hired as a full-time employee in the AJCC accounting department.

In 1984, she was promoted to assistant accounting manager, then was named assistant treasurer on Sept. 1, 1986.

"Because Vickie has worked in almost every department of the AJCC, she knows all the facets of the companies," said Covington.

For the Outstanding Young Farmer Award in the under-30 division, Steve and Bonnie Wenger, Lebanon, were named state winners. Steve is in partnership with his father on Wen-Crest Farm. They have a dairy herd that has a rolling herd average of 20,500m. In addition, they raise 150,000 turkeys and do custom field work for neighbors. They are members of the Cedar Crest Chapter and give active support to the local FFA by hosting tours, speaking and supplying equipment for the chapter. They have two children, Bradley 4, and Brandon, 2.

Other Outstanding Young Farmers Under 30 include: Region 2, Roger and Patti Garber, Mt. Joy; Region 3, Ross and Ann Snook, West Snyder; Region 4, Todd Durboraw, Gettysburg and Region 5, Terry Landis, Berwin.

In the over-30 division, Tom and Shirley Krall, Lebanon, were named state winners. They are from Region 7 and members of Cedar Crest Young Farmers. They have an 84-cow Holstein herd that has a DHIA rolling average of 22,500m. They use a free stall barn and an eight stall milking parlor. Many of the farm buildings are new in the last three years as Tom believes you need cow comfort to get good production. Calf hutches house the small calves and a Virginia style calf and dry cow barn complete the dairy facilities. The have manure storage for six months and have a nutrient management plan. To help educate the public about farming, they conduct farm tours. Their children are Joel, 10; Travis, 9; Marlin 2 and Louise, 4 mos.

Other over-30 division winners are: Region 2, Jim and Sue Musser, Mt. Joy; Region 4, Carl Keller Jr., Gettysburg and Region 5, Dennis Hay, Berwin.

grain feeding rates about 1-2 pounds per day, being careful not to throw cows off feed. While attempting to do this, remember forages are foremost when it comes to keeping the rumen normal and feed intakes high. It is essential that cows always consume adequate amounts of forage. Never sacrifice forage intake for the purpose of getting more grain into cows; it can cause an acid rumen.

Forages should make up at least 40 - 50-percent of total ration dry matter, and cows should consume a minimum of about 1.8 pounds of forage dry matter per 100 pounds of body weight. The goal is to feed a properly-balanced, nutrient dense ration to maximize nutrient intake, while also maintaining maximum dry matter intake and normal rumen function.

In the days preceding and following calving, it may beneficial to feed some cows a "stress pack," some buffers, yeast, probiotics, niacin, etc. To increase energy intake, consider feeding some fat. Work closely with your nutritionist on these matters, and try to make sure they are cost effective.

Normally, we think of feeding cows according to milk production. With today's high producing cattle, we may need to change our feeding strategies of the past. Perhaps we shouldn't even be thinking about feeding for milk production in early lactation.

Maybe we need to simply concentrate on maximizing dry matter and nutrient intake until cows are back to proper working flesh, which is a body score of about 3.0. Once this is accomplished, then we can revert to feeding according to milk production.

4. High Quality Forages. It is hard to make a lot of milk without high quality forages. Generally, forages are not thought of as an energy feed, but high quality forages are a major and valuable source of energy and other nutrients for cows, and they are more digestible.

Because they are more digestible, they move out of the rumen more rapidly, making room for the consumption of more feed, all of which increases dry matter and nutrient intakes. That is why good appetites, good quality feeds and a functional rumen are so important before and after calving.

5. Effective Fiber. A well-functioning rumen needs a certain amount of fiber. A good portion of this fiber has to come from forages, and the fiber has to be digestible and effective.

As forages mature, the digestibility of fiber decreases. On the other hand, the fiber in immature high protein alfalfa is so digestible that it has lost some of its effectiveness, or its ability to stimulate cud chewing activity.

The effectiveness of fiber is also reduced when forages and other feeds are ensiled or chopped finely. The action of unloaders, augers and mixers also can reduce particle size of feeds before they get to the cow. When this happens, it may be necessary to increase forage feeding rates in order to maintain adequate intake of effective fiber, which is needed for normal rumen function.

For the fiber in silages to be effective, at least 20-percent of the particles should be over 1.5 inches in length. Another alternative is to feed at least 5 pounds of a forage that has particle lengths of 1.5 inches or greater.

6. Balanced Rations and Feed Processing. Digestibility of feeds and nutrient absorption are improved greatly by feeding a balanced ration. Work closely with your nutritionist.

The goal is to get as many nutrients as possible absorbed into the blood stream, not to let them end up in the gutter.

Process hard grains finely enough for them to be digested. For a softer, more digestible grain in corn silage, harvest the crop when the milk line is at about the midpoint of the kernel, and choose hybrids whose ears do not dry down too far in advance of the stalk.

Avoid overheating of silages and grains as it can bind protein.

7. Blended Rations and Feeding Practices. Blending feeds or the use of a total mixed ration (TMR) can help keep cows' rumens more stable and more normal. This can improve feed intake, rumen activity, and overall efficiency of digestion.

If grains and concentrates are fed separately avoid slug feedings; limit grain feeding to a maximum of about 5-7 pounds per feeding, and try feeding cows some forages before feeding them grain.

8. Formulate Rations, Based on Cows' Actual Feed Intakes, and Weigh and Test Feeds. When formulating rations, don't overestimate how much your cows are consuming; it's better to underestimate their intakes. If you overestimate intakes, the nutrient density of the ration will be less than what it should be.

The same thing happens when you simply mix a ration for fewer cows than what you are actually feeding. That's opposite of what the cows need; if intake is less, the density of the ration needs to be greater — not less — so cows consume the nutrients they need.

Weigh feeds fed and feeds refused so you can get a more accurate estimate of intakes. Test ensiled feeds weekly for moisture content and adjust rations accordingly. This is very important! Also check accuracy of scales and weigh cells on mixers, and test the TMR mix to verify the accuracy of mixing.

9. Access to Feed and Water, and Bunk Management. Be sure cows have easy access to feed 20-24 hours a day, with plenty of good quality water no further than about 50 feet away.

Cows can't consume feed and make milk on an empty feed bunk! Keep the feed fresh, and to stimulate intake, push it up to the cows or feed them several times a day.

Feed cows about 5-percent more feed than they will clean up, and use the manger sweepings to feed lower producers, dry cows or heifers.

Provide about 2 feet of bunk space per cow and clean the bunk frequently.

10. Healthy, Stress-Free Cows. Healthy cows have better appetites and produce more milk than those that are stressed from such things as fatty livers, difficult

The best just got better

More choices, better productivity and uncompromising quality in what we build best.

Want more cutting power?
Put the non-stop action of our 3-bladed triangular discs to work for you. Whether you're cutting forage with Vicon's new, wider disc mowers or with GMR mower conditioners, this advanced disc cutting system won't plug or leave you worrying about leaf loss. There's one more blade than the competition. It's the extra edge you need in a heavy, wet crop or fire ant mounds.

AM 2800/3200 disc mowers work full width at 9'4" and 10'6" with a flatter cutterbar to streamline crop flow and eliminate clogs. Conditioning rollers, set at a 25° angle on GMR mower conditioners, leave fluffy, fast drying swaths with high energy leaves intact.

Need flexibility to round bale silage, hay and straw? Here it is! Two efficient choices for more profitable forage production - wet or dry.

Fourteen razor sharp blades on the Deutz-Fahr Opticut cut high moisture forage in short lengths for compression into extremely dense 4' x 4' or 4' x 5' bales, weighing up to 1500 and 2000 lbs., respectively. For baling hay or straw, just fold the cutting mechanism out of the way, hydraulically.

With the new RV 126 variable chamber baler, you make the call. The twin belt design lets you tailor dense, uniform bales from 2' to 6' diameters, in any weight, in any forage crop, all at the turn of a knob. Both systems package with twine or net wrap.

When it comes to making better hay faster and more profitably, we give you the best.

Looking for a durable, top driven mower? Harvest quality hay with PZ's new high speed Cyclomower drum mowers. Clean cutting mounted machines range from 5'5" to 6'9" widths.

Adams Holstein Directors Meet

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — A progress report on the current membership drive, adoption of a budget and confirmation of plans for coming events filled the agenda when the board of directors of the Adams County Holstein Association met recently at the home of Robin and John Thompson at Westminster.

President Marvin Brown presided at the meeting. Steve Wood, membership chairman, urged all board members to make follow-up calls promptly for membership renewals. Prompt action will help the club meet its goal and qualify for the financial incentive offered by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

The board confirmed that a type classification meeting is to be held on Thursday, March 3, 7:30 p.m. at the Ber-Creek Farm of Vincent Lobaugh, Lobaugh Road, Aspers. Following the barn meeting, the board plans a joint meeting with the Dairy Promotion Committee to assess possibilities for conducting a dairy princess pageant.

Pennfield Dairy Days Features Dairy Experts

MT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Dairymen from around the state who attended one of five Pennfield Dairy Days held recently at various locations heard expert advise on managing their dairy cattle, especially with nutrition.

Pennfield Feeds, a large area agricultural production feed manufacturer, sponsored the seminars with specific emphasis on feet and leg problems, economical feeding strategies for high producing cows, and managing herd replacements to achieve best costs and best animals.

Timothy Snyder, PhD., PAS, is manager of dairy nutrition for Pennfield Corp., and started the seminar with an overview of dairy farm management considerations, focusing on reducing costs and improving efficiencies through instituting tighter controls on replacement animals.

According to Snyder, good record keeping is essential to all good management.

He also talked about saving production costs by reducing the number of replacement animals being raised to milking age. He said that reducing age to first calving has been proven to eliminate the need to carry a significant number of replacement heifers.

According to Snyder, the total number of animals on the farm can be kept to a minimum if the amount of time to entry of a heifer into the milking string can be reduced to 22 to 24 months from the more traditional 26- to 28-month calving interval.

Snyder cautioned however, that he wasn't talking about breeding undersized, physically immature heifers, but rather, feeding them to achieve physical maturity at an earlier age.

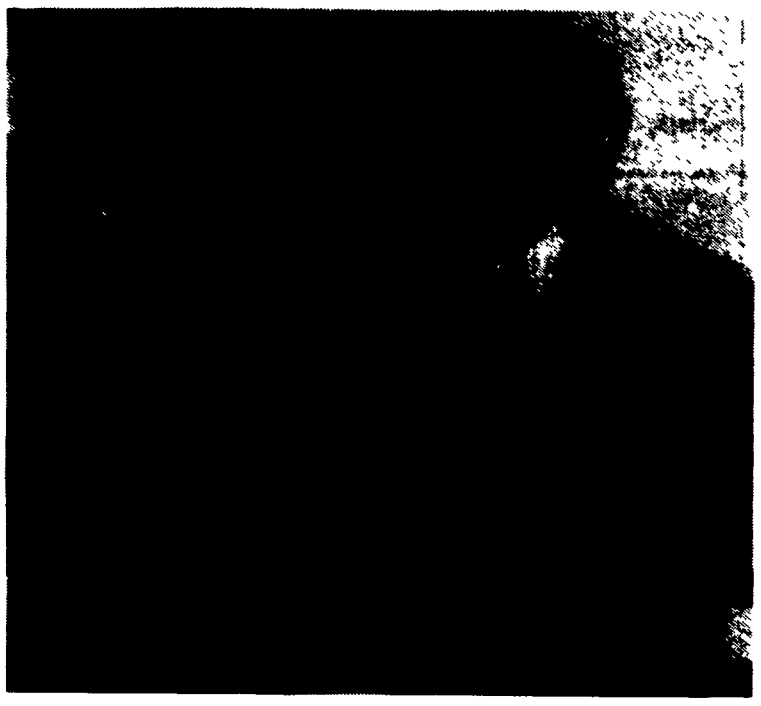
According to Snyder, Pennfield's Elite Heifer program and Go-Calf Heifer program are two which are suited for use in achieving a shorter first calving interval.

Others speaking included Normand St. Pierre, PhD, PAS, president of Papillon Agricultural Products.

In general, the nutrition expert said that there can be a great variability in the values of feeds. He said that by using feeds which come from a bulk feeds producer with an excellent quality control program can eliminate variation five-fold.

Also speaking was Jan Shearer, DVM with the University of Florida. According to Dr. Shearer, foot problems cost the dairy industry a great deal in money and production, and that many are preventable through good practices and nutrition and that others are treatable, under the guidance of a veterinarian.

Shearer focused on laminitis, which is a condition thought to be caused by nutritional imbalances in developing cattle that can cause lactic acidosis and lead to improper development of the foot structure in the heifer.



From the left, Jan Shearer, DVM from University of Florida, and Normand St. Pierre, PhD., and president of Papillon Ag Products, discuss dairy cattle care issues at Pennfield Dairy Days.

LVNB Holds Annual Ag Seminar

PRESCOTT (Lebanon Co.)—Two professors from Penn State University provided the opening look at the business of farming in the morning program at the 15th seminar on agriculture, sponsored by the Lebanon Valley National Bank Thursday. Louis Moore, prefessor of agriculture economics, gave his 14th annual ag outlook, and Robert Yonkers, assistant professor of agricultural economics, concentrated on the outlook for the dairy industry.

"People (farmers) who survived the 1980's are in a much stronger financial position," Moore said. "They are doing a better job of managing their farms, and the number of dropouts are not nearly as great.

"When you look at projections, natural disasters play a part, and you don't know where or when they will occur. Even this year cannot be called normal, so you can expect anything.

Moore said statistics show that farmers who have someone working off the farm are doing better. More and more of the farmer's income is coming from the farm. And he said we can expect government involvement in farming to diminish.

Specialization and contracting will become greater for the production side of agriculture, and exports will be the lowest in 20 years.

Overall, Moore looks for the agriculture economy to improve this year with net income to increase. But not all enterprises will share in the increase. For example, over-production of beef will keep the price depressed. But

Hoober's New Facility Designed For Efficiency, Communication

MIDDLETOWN, Del. — The impressive new facilities to house the growing Hoober Equipment, Inc., Case IH dealership was the backdrop for an open house Tuesday as company officials, farmers, and suppliers gathered to celebrate a show of optimism for the business of farming.

In 1982, the Charles Hoober family purchased White Bros. in the area. At that time, 15 people were employed. Now sales have increased 10 times and the dealership has 53 employees to run the business. That's why the move four miles south on Route 301 was necessary.

"We planned this move for two years," Charles Hoober said. "And it took a year to build. We acted as our own general contractor and used some of our labor, so we have a facility that cost less than the banks said it would."

Designed by the employees for efficiency, the building, which measures 32,000 square feet with a total of 41,000 square feet of space, features easy communication between the departments. As you enter the building, the display area, the parts department, the service areas, and the sales offices are all visible from the receptionist's desk.

"Communication is critical when you are dealing with a service business," Hoober said. "This building was designed to make communication easy. In the old building, the receptionist always needed to get on the phone to find anyone in the building. Now she can see everyone from her desk.

"Efficiency and communication have been designed into the service work areas, too. With 15 mechanics at work, if I can save seven-tenths of an hour per man per day, I can pay the mortage with the savings from the new efficiency. And now we have room to hold equipment inside while we wait for a part to come in.

"But I don't want to give the impression that facilities make the business," Hoober said. "People make the business. It has been our good employees who have made our business successful in the past. And if it is successful in the future, it will be because of people as well."

The Hoober business has two main divisions: agriculture equipment and commercial lawn tractor and mowing equipment. And the new location provides ideal access to both these markets. The agriculture business comes up from south Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. And the commercial lawn and mowing business draws customers from the urban areas around Newark, Wilmington, and other nearby population areas.

"Manufacturers have changed their marketing strategy in the last number of years," Hoober said. "They are looking for larger dealerships to handle their business. We want to be part of their plans. That's why we have designed our operation to accommodate the larger farm operators at both our Intercourse, Pennsylvania, location and here at Middletown."

The major ice storm that blanketed the area Tuesday made air arrivals late and caused hazardous driving conditions that reduced the number of attendees to some extent. But more than 800 persons managed to attend.

Suppliers and company officials were talking of a good year for agriculture in 1994.

Herman Kosten, Case IH vice president sales, North American division, said future growth of the industry depends on satisfying the more sophisticated needs of the farmer. He said, "Today's customers look for support after the sale almost as much as the original price of the equipment."

Dennis Schwieger, Case IH vice president marketing, North American division, said the new facilities at Middletown show the Hoober committment to agriculture and the local community. The farm economy looks better than in 1993 and the good operator will be successful just as in the past.

Robin Killian, Case IH regional manager, aid the new international trade agreements have helped U.S farmers to have a more level playing field and, given this opportunity, will be able to compete very well.

Harold Bower, Case IH area sales manager, said the outlook for 1994 is more steady given the good grain prices. He said we are heading in the right direction and the good feeling in the company covers everyone from company chairman Mike Walsh down to all the field people.

Earlier this week, Tenneco Inc., the parent company of JI Case, released earning figures that reported operating income nearly doubled in the fourth quarter. And credit was given to the JI Case division as the leader of the companies' rebounds.

Dennis Hann, regional sales manager, Case IH, recognized this turnaround in 1993 and said it was because commodity prices improved, customer attitudes improved, and, even in spite of some drought areas, we finished 1993 very strong.

"Now in the first quarter of 1994 the equipment market is much stronger than 1993 started," Hann said. "For example, we are completly sold out of combines from the factory out through April. If a

Pennsylvania Auctioneers' Annual Meeting Report

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 1994 convention of the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association (PAA) was held at the Harrisburg Marriott.

The convention was billed as providing "something for everyone - fellowship, education, food, new ideas, meeting friends and competitors, and plenty of fun." Mission accomplished!

The forty-sixth state convention got under way with a seminar titled "Shut Up and Listen . . . Back to the Basics," by veteran auctioneer Larry Reed, CAI, of DuBois. This presentation was designed to assist newcomers to the auction profession as well as seasoned professionals.

The agenda also included committee meetings, exhibits and the official opening of the convention with PAA President Sherman Hostetter Jr. of Beaver Falls extending the welcome.

Seminars were presented by Wil Hahn, CAI, president of the National Auctioneers Association, and a Bath native; Fred H. Reger, CAI, AARE, of Manassas, VA; Mervin Adams, Millersburg; Peggy Thompson, Chambersburg. Chuck Lawver served as coordinator of a round table discussion on antiques and personal property. Discussion leaders at the round table included Jerry Schwenk, Coopersburg; Barry Slosberg, Philadelphia; and Wayne Patterson, New Castle.

Other events included a preview of the bid contest and fun auction merchandise, followed by the contest and auction. Blaine Rentzel of Emigsville served as chairman of the events.

Named as Pennsylvania state championship bid caller was Jerry Pennay, Jr. of Kingsley; the runner-up in the bid contest was Lee Hostetter of Beaver Falls. Third through tenth places included Nevin Rentzel, York; C. Sherman Allan, Conneaut Lake, Kim Crawford, Bloomsburg; Mike Calvert, Linesville; Jan Waltz, Manheim; Dave Martin, Gettysburg; Sandy Brittingham, Waltersburg; and Patricia Smith, Brogue.

The PAA board of directors held a meeting as well as the annual president's banquet. Chapter luncheons were also held as well as a new PAA member luncheon.

Seminar speakers were James Weigand, Dean of the School of Continuing Studies, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN; and Richard and Pat Kiko of Canton, OH. Fred Toomey served as coordinator of a round table discussion on real estate; discussion leaders included Jerry Burke of Meshoppen on residential and single property real estate and Lee Hostetter of Beaver Falls on multi-parcel real estate. A round table discussion on agriculture was headed by John Fry of Ephrata; discussion leaders included Howard Visscher of Nichols, NY, and C. Sherman Allen of Conneaut Lake.

Ralph Zettlemoyer of Fogelsville and R.M. "Pete" Stewart of Armagh were named as recipients of the 1994 Hall of Fame awards.

people who sell grain will do better than in past years.

Yonkers has an upbeat look at dairying. He said the dairy industry is growing, and you should not believe all the negative press and bad news you read. "Just because someone else's cost is over $16.00 per hundred doens't say your costs are that high," Yonkers said. "If you are doing well, there is nothing wrong with that. A lot of people in the dairy industry are making a good living."

The loss in cow numbers is coming mostly from the small herds that go out of business. Productivity is increasing, and Yonkers thinks that if dairymen in the East improve their management, we can have the same production averages that they have in some of the western states.

"Our costs are not that much different than in other dairy states," Yonkers said. "We don't make as much milk per farm because of their large herds. We have a higher investment per cow, but much of this higher investment comes from machinery investment because we still grow much of our feed. Our cash costs are not out of line, but on some Yonkers said the dairy industry has lost its political power most noticeably in the last election where now only about 70 of the 435 U.S. representatives have dairy farmers in their districts. And many others have only a few dairy farmers. It's hard to get a majority on dairy issues.

And another change is the public perception of the dairy industry that is driving public policy and legislation. BST is the current debate, but artificial insemination had the same nasty debate in the 1950's. But that debate was only in the farm press. People in New York and Philadelphia didn't read about it. That debate was with people who know and understood agriculture. Now the dairy industry is debated by people who know nothing about ag practices.

Yonkers believes the future of the dairy industry lies in marketing rather than government programs. "Marketing is where you should spend more time," he said.

Other speakers listed on the program included Gary Smith, wildlife conservation officer of Lebanon County; Albert Murry, president, Lebanon Valley National Bank, and Jay Irwin, retired Lancaster County extension director.

A family style lunch was served at noon.

customer comes in today to buy a combine, unless it is on hand with the dealer, a brand new one out of the plant would now come from May production. We haven't seen this for a number of years."

Hann said the aging population of equipment and the improved commodity prices have combined to spur the market for equipment and makes 1994 look like a good year for agriculture.

For the Hoobers, the Middletown dealership represents half of their business, with the other half in the dealership in Intercourse. Charles Hoober's father started the business in 1941. By 1950, the second building was built and 1965 the dealership was moved across the street to the present location.

In 1975, the Hoobers came to Maryland to represent the Steiger Company and then in 1982 they moved to the Middletown area. On December 3, 1993, the move was made to the new facilities showcased this week.

"We have always tried to give the best service for a reasonable price," Hoober said. "We have never felt comfortable selling something we could not stand behind. We put more effort into the service department than we do in sales. The new facility gives us the opportunity to be more efficient to serve ourselves and our customers."

must be installed in order to prove that the labeling is not false.

In other words, the proof of not using Posilac would have to be made completely public and be completely verifiable.

Those who would even post a sign in a store window, without adequate proof to support the claim, could also be liable for civil damages, according to Monsanto spokesman Gard.

Opposition to Posilac was reported last week in an Associated Press story. However, the significance of the opposition was not reported.

According to the news story, there were a few opponents of BST from the Midwest, New England states, and Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream.

According to our records, they are basically the same opponents who have vocalized protest over the use of BST for several years; out of a fear of biotechnology, or a belief that artificial BST will cause economic injury to dairy farm families by lowering the price paid for milk.

According to Gard, his analysis of the opposition to BST is that these are the same people who have been protesting the product from almost the beginning.

"Primarily those are the only ones that we've seen. In fact, I've seen a dramatic decline (in protest) over the weekend and it looks like they are moving on to other areas," he said.

The next target for the nonprofit opposition groups may be irradiation of foods, he said.

But as far as Posilac, Gard said Wednesday morning in a telephone interview that business is well.

"Sales are pretty good. The phones are steady," he said. "I talked to customer service this morning. We were pleasantly surprised how strong sales were on Friday. It was a constant flow.

"Those who called in were very positive and ready to go and we had very few folks call in and state that they were not in favor of this product," Gard said.

Sales in southeastern Pennsylvania were also good, Gard said, adding that, as of Tuesday, he had 100 herds signed up for the product.

"Most of these producers are producers who have ordered enough doses that they have a significant number of cows on," Gard said.

U.S.," he said.

To get profitability, said Wagner, "We need corn use. We don't really care where it's used or what it's used for, we just need uses."

Many products are being many out of corn, which include a windshield washer with the "Bugoff" label; french fries by Wendy's Restaurant, which use 100 percent corn oil; corn sweeteners (53 percent of sweeteners used in the U.S. are corn sweeteners); biodegradable pastics used in fast food packaging; compostable diapers; road construction materials; oil containers; gun targets; plastic bags; razor blade handles; golf tees; ballpoint pens; silverware; soap; food texturizers (xanthum gum, used in salad dressing and ice cream); packaging peanuts that dissolve within seconds; Ultralight, a charcoal lighting material; and absorbent products (a pound of a product called Hydrasborb can absorb 1,400 pounds of water in a minute).

Herman Manbeck, Womelsdorf, right, accepts the first place award in the shelled grain class regular harvest size from Curt Rakestraw, secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association.

Wagner said that a deicer product made of corn "will help us down the road. Environmentalists love all our biodegradables." Also, the corn sweetener industry is booming. One bushel of corn provides enough corn sweetener for 324 cans of soda.

Clean Water Bill

Agriculture is "in the crosshairs" of a Clean Water Act Reauthorization Bill that may be passed by Congress and signed by President Clinton this year, according to a Washington, D.C. representative of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Dave Stawick, NCGA assistant vice president, spoke about the efforts of the NCGA to lobby in behalf of row-crop farmers to ensure that representatives in the U.S. House and Senate who are debating the bill can understand the farmer's perspective.

Stawick spoke to growers and corn industry representatives at the beginning of the 1994 Pennsylvania Corn Conference last week.

While health care, welfare reform, and tough crime measures are taking up the concerns of the Clinton Administration this election year, the environmental groups are pushing hard to have the clean water act reauthorization bill take into account nonpoint source pollution, which targets farmers.

The bill may be the only agriculture/environmental bill signed by the president this year, said Stawick.

Stawick explained the history of the bill and what it would involve.

The Clean Water Act, signed into law in 1972, dealt with the "point" sources of pollution directly from industry. The act was last reauthorized in 1987.

But with the proposed bill, the biggest concerns are the nonpoint sources, including nitrogen from either commercial or animal fertilizer. The environmental groups claim farmers are the culprits, even though there is evidence that a big nonpoint source contributor has been sewage treatment facilities that need upgrading, in addition to golf courses and lawn care systems.

Stawick said the NCGA is working with a coalition, including row-crop organizations, crop industry representatives, The Fertilizer Institute, and animal livestock groups to provide data that shows that farmers are responsible with nitrogen use. However, said Stawick, the committees in Congress that the coalition faces "do not necessarily have agricultural interests at the top of their list.

"Many environmental groups would like to have a blanket national program of management measures for nutrients, for sediment, for pesticides, and other forms of nonpoint source pollution."

The Senate bill, which may combine with a similar bill under House review, may mandate stricter requirements. It would differ in several ways from the current, voluntary authorization.

But NCGA and the coalition insists that the voluntary program, in place since 1987, is "not broken," Stawick said. "It's just not well funded."

Congress authorized about $130 million to be spent last year, but to implement the authorization, only $80 million was actually appropriated, said Stawick. Most years, only about $50 million is appropriated, which amounts to about $1 million per state — not enough funds to make the program work.

He said that is more money was appropriated, the incentive would be there, in addition to the expertise and material, to conduct the educational programs and cost-sharing that has proven effective.

The proposal that has the most chance of passing is the one under review from the Sentate Environmental and Public Works Committee.

Whatever bill finally appears, the requirements spelled out in it would not have to be fully in effect on farms until the year 2005.

Regarding wetlands portions of the bill, the bottom line, according to Stawick, is that sponsors of the bill are waiting to see the report from the National Academy of Sciences due out after the fall of this year. The study looks at identification and delienation criteria, spelling out what constitutes a wetland and what provisions for protection might be.

CHORE-TIME Ultraflo® feeders

More Than 260 Ultraflo® Systems Have Been Sold In The Northeast Since 1985 - That's Over 20 Million Birds!

Over 80% of the nation's top egg producers have already switched to Chore-Time cages with ULTRAFLO® Feeders!*

Here are the facts why ULTRAFLO® outperforms chain feeders

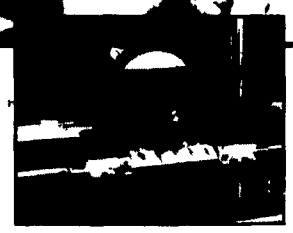
FEED SAVINGS. Customers report 1½ to 2 lbs per 100 birds/day—over $10,000 per year savings on a 100,000-bird house. Year after year!

TROUGH DESIGN. High tensile steel for strength. No feed buildup or waste like chain trough.

NO HI-GRADING of feed, due to our design. Chain lets birds pick over feed while feeder runs.

REMIXES FEED. Our auger slowly revolves, keeping old and new feed blended. Chain doesn't, so feed can get stale.

REPAIR & MAINTENANCE. Ours needs the least of all feeders. Easy splicing with auger connector, and no troublesome corners or chain guides to replace. Saves money and time year after year.



SIMPLE OPERATION. "Push-Pull" Power Units with low HP motor are located along the feeder line as needed. Have hardened steel gears for trouble-free life. Microprocessor control lets you program feeding time to the second.

EASY AUGER CONNECTOR. Allows fast and simple installation, also quick and easy repair of auger if ever necessary. Auger and trough are both warranted 5 full years. Chain feeders are not.

Egg producers have been putting up with obsolete chain feeders far too long. Now there's a better way: Chore-Time's proven ULTRAFLO Cage Feeding System. Since introduction, more than 80% of the top 54 egg producers* have gone to ULTRAFLO. A lot of smaller ones have too.

They've all looked at the advantages and chosen ULTRAFLO. That's because it makes them more profitable. Total egg production and egg size—these are the best benefits of our complete feeding system.

Why not check out the facts for yourself? Contact us now—or ask any producer who owns ULTRAFLO.

Because the only negative comments about our feeding system come from our competition—not from our customers.

BST Sales Strong

And while he said that sales were good, one of the most frequent questions he said he gets is about confidentiality.

"Our policy has been, and will continue to be, to maintain strict confidentiality with those producers doing business with us. Their names are not available to the public, to the cooperatives, or to the processors. Their names are not available to anyone, except us and them," he said.

As far as barn inspections, Posilac is an over-the-counter drug and, while it requires refrigeration, there is no need to keep the product in the barn.

Furthermore, there is no test that can identify the difference between milk coming from a treated or an untreated cow.

The company intends to continue its 24-hour telephone ordering service direct to Monsanto. Callers who place an order are given a pre-approved account number and the product is shipped to them within two days.

The company is also offering an introductory special on the product, for minimum orders of 50 doses and/or an order that reflects one dose per milking head.

The special offer is in effect until May 4. For those who receive the product through a carrier, the cost of shipping is paid by the purchaser.

Gard said that followup research continues on the product — the most researched product submitted for FDA approval, according to reports.

Gard said that currently a cow has been on a lactation using Posilac for 1,200 days with a daily milking production of 50 to 60 pounds.

He said that cow was one that was on a trial and has been continued in order to determine the product's effect in a long-term, continuous application.

He said that while some cows naturally continue extended lactations, this is the longest continuous lactation using Posilac.

Most of the cows used in field trials of Posilac have been on the product for four lactations, Gard said, adding that many are getting ready to go into fifth lactation.

Adams Holstein

Jeffrey Roche reported that the Junior Holstein Club is host of the State Junior Convention, at the Ramada Inn, Gettysburg. The local club has been conducting a calf raffle with proceeds to be applied toward construction of a new dairy barn at the South Mountain Fairgrounds.

The board voted a donation of $400 toward support of the National Junior Holstein Convention which is being planned for Pittsburgh in June 1995. Any youth up to age 21 may join the Junior Holstein Club through payment of a one-time membership fee of $15.

Special Activities Chairman Dan Waybright announced that contacts are being made to organize an educational tour of outstanding Holstein herds in Frederick County, Maryland. Tentative date of Tuesday, April 5, was selected with information to appear in the Extension Dairy Newsletter when confirmed.

County Agent Thomas E. Piper announced that it was still possible to attend the Dairy Nutrition Teleconference which started on Thursday, Feb. 10, and is to continue Feb. 17 and 24, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at downlink sites in several states, including the Adams County Extension Office.

Why Are Massey Ferguson Tractors The World's Best Selling?

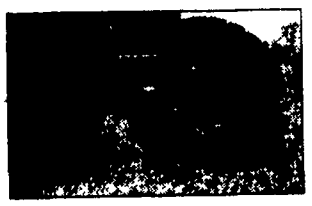
When building a 2WD tractor, there's little reason to conserve weight. In fact, you may well end up adding weight for traction.

With 4WD tractors, you really don't need, or even want so much weight. It just makes the tractor less maneuverable, hurts performance, lowers efficiency and increases soil compaction.

MF 300 Series 4WD tractors are engineered with just the right weight, balance and strength for optimum 4WD performance. This means easy handling, with all the performance of bigger, more expensive tractors.

Smart engineering is just one of the many reasons why, over the last 28 years, more people have selected Massey Ferguson tractors than any other brand. Check out all the reasons today at your MF dealer.

Designed from the beginning for 4WD performance.



Wheels don't lean on full lock, reducing soil damage and tire wear

Standard hydrostatic steering for fast, easy turns and precise handling.

Low-rate MF financing for qualified buyers makes ownership easy.

Hydralock front-wheel differential engages automatically with rear differential lock.

50° turning angle means less "jockeying" in tight quarters, and shorter headlands.

TAKING TIME

When Your Family Income Drops

The past month of snow has meant a real boost in family income for construction and landscape contractors and farmers who own plowing equipment. The drifts brought urgent phone calls which put some extra dollars in their pockets. But for many others, the snowfall has brought a sharp reduction in wages — one that could really set a family back as they try to stay current with mortgage and holiday credit payments.

Adults who work at hourly positions, people who had to take time off because children were home from school, shop owners who lost needed revenue when customers stayed home or doors were closed, all are now scrambling to deal with the gap between bills and wages. If you are in this position, take some time this weekend to work out a plan to compensate for the shortfall.

Food expenses and recreation or social expenses are the two most flexible parts of a family's monthly budget. As a family, sit down and discuss ways that you might temporarily decrease your normal expenses in these areas to help bridge the gap in your finances. Ask members to pack lunches instead of eating out. Carefully plan menus that include lots of pasta or rice to stretch main dishes. Eat homemade hot cereals. These tend to be more economical than the instant, prepackaged cereals or the commercial cold cereals. Eliminate prepared snack foods for several weeks. When you get the munchies, pop your own popcorn. Make a game of searching your pantry and cellar storage areas to find canned vegetables and fruits that could be used for casseroles and soups. See if you can create a menu for this week from supplies on hand instead of making a trip to the grocery store.

Instead of spending a lot of money on gifts, candy, and flowers for each other for Valentine's Day, make homemade, free gifts. Again, search through closets and drawers for arts and crafts supplies. Warm up your creativity to do some writing. Scan old magazines or books for illustrations and appropriate quotations.

This month instead of spending money to "go out" for entertainment, think of free options. Visit at a friend's house. Play board games or card games. Check out a free video from the public library. Get outside for some exercise and fresh air. Volunteer at a local community center. Organize a volleyball or basketball game at a local school, church or community hall. These are all less expensive options than the typical weekend out. What can your family think of?

These are just two areas of the budget that you may be able to trim. The best way to get a grasp on family expenses is to keep track of the money spent on a daily basis. Jot down the items and costs in a pocket notebook. Review the list every few days. Are there costs that could be reduced? Phone bills? Excessive costs for gasoline? Habits that could be kicked?

You, as a family, have the opportunity to make some important choices about how you spend hard-earned dollars. Consider some of these choices as temporary compromises. You may find out that you had fun volunteering on a Saturday at the community center or that you don't mind eating air-popped popcorn. After you get this month's bills paid, think about how this new-found money could be redirected toward another goal your family would really enjoy. Making the choices takes time, but the results are worth it.

Anspach Family Finds Adventures In Life

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHILLINGTON (Berks Co.) — Tall, slender timbers stand like sentinels on the steep snow-covered slope that rises behind the Anspachs' two-story frame house.

An occasional bleat from a sheep and the bawl of calf split the frigid stillness. A wooden jungle gym, a camper trailer, and a woolen scarf strewn across the porch swing are mute evidence that children live at Hillside Acres Farm.

At 3:30 p.m. those tell-tale signs burst into reality as four students spill from the van and tear into the house.

Tales from school, questions about the recent lamb birthing of Dallas and Buffalo, and details on evening chores are discussed during the after-school munch-out.

For the Anspach family, life centers around 4-H activities. Both Deb and her husband Dave are club leaders.

"Four-H has opened up all kinds of opportunities for us," she said. "It is not just a child event but a total parent event.

"Adventures in Life" is what I call this," Deb said of her children's involvement in 4-H clubs of sheep, beef, dairy, swine, air rifle, livestock judging, and science.

"Four-H is the best investment we ever made. It's made up of good, solid, conservative kids from good, solid conservative families. It's the best alternative I know to guns, drugs, and trouble that affect kids today," Deb said.

The oldest child, 15-year-old Theresa, is the Pennsylvania Hampshire Sheep Ambassador, who tends a flock of 45 Hampshires at home.

Because she grew tired of competing with an older sister in the showring and because she prefers to be unique, 13-year-old Krystal shuns Hamps in favor of nurturing the woolly Rambouillet breed.

"In blocking and grooming, she is one of the best in the state," Theresa said of her sister.

In addition to helping with the 49 sheep, David, 11, and William, 9, pamper 2 steers, a dairy calf, 15 chickens, 4 rabbits, 3 cats, and a dog.

The Anspachs are a prime example of what a industrious family can do with a patch of ground that is only 2½ acres.

The first few years that the kids began showing in 4-H competition required an outlay of money for the parents, but now with the premium prize money, the children are able to buy feed, pay vet bills, and reinvest in new stock.

They've even paid for a 30x50-foot solar/shade barn and bought a 5½ -ton load of hay.

The barn, Deb said, originated from England technology. Tubal aluminum poles hold up the two layers of polyurethane air inflated roof. It requires electricity to keep it inflated. If the electric is turned off, a generator must be used within 35 minutes. It has been tested in 90-mile-an-hour winds and has withstood this winter's heavy snows with the help of family shoveling off snow.

Open sides allow air circulation resulting in a 95 percent success rate in controlling ammonia. Healthy animals are the result of the open environment.

Although chores are split on a daily basis, each child has his own animals to show. Deb posts a new schedule every month so that each child knows who is responsible for water and feeding.

Each child rises at 5:30 a.m. to finish barn chores on time to catch the school bus at 7:15. Evening chores again find family participation in the barn.

Summer months the family travels around the state to compete in 12 different fairs.

Deb said she has a philosphy of four Golden Rules for the showring in the following order.

1. Be safe in the showring.
2. Learn something.
3. Have fun.
4. Earn a ribbon.

"A ribbon is nothing if you don't fulfill number two and three," Deb said. "The purpose of going into that showring is not to primarily win a ribbon but to learn something and have fun while doing it."

Deb is a crusader for safety in the showring. Some shows are downright dangerous when there are too many kids and animals crowded together, she said. She has prevailed to get classes broken down into smaller groups and in putting extra adults in the showring to help handle nervous steers.

"My first steer was 525 pounds of psychotics when I took him in the ring the first time," Theresa said.

With continual handling and experience, the steer calmed down, but adults are often needed to help during the transition period, Deb said.

The family is pleased that their homegrown stock is competitive with purchased stock.

"We want to improve our own stock rather than buy it from someone else," Dave explained. In recent years, the Anspachs purchased a ram to introduce structural correctness for the breed. Now they are looking at purchasing a new ram to increase the size of their stock.

Dad Anspach thrives during the lamb birthing season. Two years ago he missed watching the Super Bowl but this year he was able to catch most of it although twin lambs, Dallas and Buffalo, chose Super Bowl Sunday for their debut.

As the state Hampshire Ambassador, it is Theresa's duty to travel around the state to hand out fair ribbons. Theresa's duties as Hampshire Ambassador and in Pennsylvania Hampshire Ambassador Theresa Anspach hugs her favorite Hampshire.

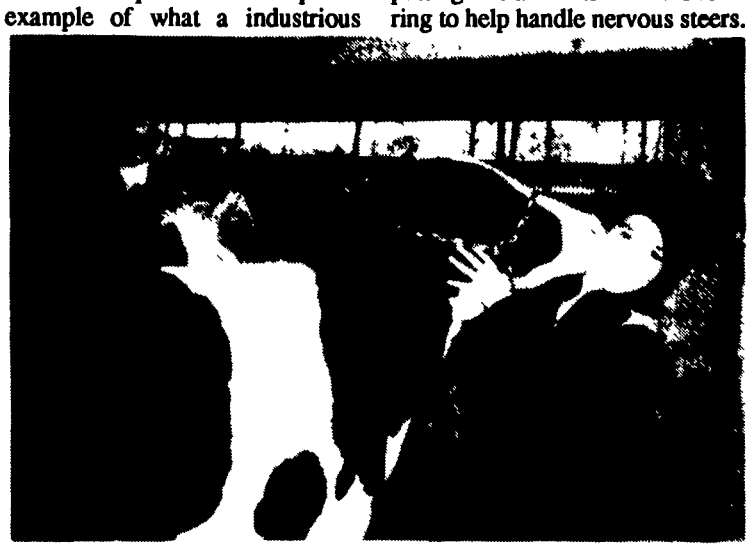
Everyone works together in the Anspach family, who say that 4-H has opened up many doors of opportunities and is an investment in teaching fairness, clean fun, and learning adventures. From left are Deb and Dave Anspach with children, David, 11; Krystal, 13; Theresa, 15; and William 9.



Nine-year-old William gets a smooch while caring for his 4-H project.

Theresa and David climb this hill to feed the chickens and ducks located in an adjacent pen.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"What?" asked my friend, during a recent weather-centered conversation.

"What!" she repeated, disbelief in her voice. "What do you mean you don't read the almanac?"

But I do read the almanac. In fact, I have a collection of almanacs. And I do read them. I read the jokes. I read the recipes, I read the riddles, I read the puzzles.....

And yes, I read the weather predictions. But not with any intention of taking them seriously.

(And we don't plant according to the signs of the moon. We plant at planting season as quickly and practically as we can get manure hauled out and fields tilled and ready for the planting equipment. Who has time to even look at the moon during the spring rush?)

Reportedly, at least some of the almanacs' predictions called for a cold and snowy January. My only copy on hand for 1994 is a sort of condensed publication, called Farmers' Almanac, published in Maine. It called - at various times through the month — for rain and snow, periods of colder, and a stretch of windy and warmer weather.

We got all that. We even got the "warmer" part— a move up of the thermometer from minus-10-degrees to plus-10-degrees. The predictions toward the end of January for showers and flurries did coincide well with the last Friday of the month. If you can call the pouring rain which came through our basement, flooded area roads and then froze up into giant skating rinks across the region "showers."

What we seem to forget — especially after several years of relatively warm winters — is that snow, ice, cold, and wind chill (almanacs haven't gotten into wind chill) are normal for January. It all just got more intense and more prolonged through this year's stretch of the frigid stuff.

But remember. We also had heat last July which set records, didn't we? If there's a trend, it seems to be that whatever we get will be to extremes. Weather to the max, if you will.

Just for fun, this past week's weather prediction in my almanac called for an intense storm on the East Coast through the early part of the week, then heavy rain toward the weekend.

(I'm writing this more than a week ahead of publication. How close were we?)

This upcoming week is to see clearing in the Northeast, (Clearing cold? Clearing warm? Clearing out?) with a major frost in Florida predicted around the 20th. Next week — the 21st to the 24th — is to be fair and milder, with near record heat in the Great Lakes area, then moving to sunny and pleasant in the Northeast toward the end of the month. Yessss! Please, please, please let that one be on target!

See, I really do read the almanac.

But as for taking any of it more seriously than light entertainment, let me just share this. My zodiac sign - Libra - is described in the almanac as: "charming.... gracious, and having discriminating taste.... see all sides of an issue.... keep feelings under control, are impersonal and make fine mediators."

For someone who finds herself becoming more outspoken and opinionated with each passing year, the above zodiac description sums up perfectly why I read and collect almanacs.

I like to laugh.

How To Have A Happy Heart

(NAPS) — Heart attacks are the number one killer in the United States. More than half of the daily 4,000 deaths occur outside the hospital during the first three hours of symptoms.

"Overeating and drinking can be dangerous for an already overstressed individual," says William E. Baubie, III, MD, an emergency specialist in Kingston, New York.

Dr. Baubie and the American College of Emergency Physicians recommend the following tips to make this a "heart healthy" year.

• Recognize the Warning Signs of a Heart Attack

People often dismiss heart attack symptoms as indigestion. Key symptoms include a heaviness, pressure or tightness in the chest or shortness of breath. This pressure can spread to the neck, shoulder, arms or back. Sweating, nausea, "heartburn" and/or fatigue are other signs.

• Understand the Risk Factors

A decrease in blood flow to the heart causes heart attacks. Risk factors include high blood pressure, high cholesterol, smoking, diabetes and a family history of heart attacks. Any sudden increased demand on the heart, such as shoveling snow, excessive meals, or even grief, may cause a decreased supply of blood to the heart, which can trigger a heart attack.

• Know How to Help a Heart Attack Victim

Thrombolytic therapy, or heart attack drug treatment, can save most victims if given within a few hours of the onset of symptoms.

Learn how to recognize the warning signs and get help quickly. Don't allow the person to deny the problem or feel embarrassed. Call 9-1-1 or your local emergency number. Remain calm and offer to accompany the person to the hospital.

• Decrease Your Chances of Having a Heart Attack

Dr. Baubie recommends eating wisely, exercising and actively listening to your body. "You only have one heart, which beats 100,000 times a day. Treat it right!" he says.

Be "Heart Smart" and save a life — it may even be your own. For further information regarding heart disease, contact:

CHESAPEAKE CITY, Md. — "When my husband had a heart attack and bypass heart surgery a year ago, I had to have a crash course on heart-healthy eating," said Jean Major from Chesapeake City, Md.

Jean spent about 200 hours during the next few months studying heart-healthy recipes and cooking methods.

"Many of the recipes that I've tried are horrible tasting. It is discouraging to waste time cooking a dish that tastes blah," she said.

Through experimenting, Jean found some favorite recipes and learned some tricks that she is willing to share with our readers.

"The key to healthy cooking is to cut out as much fat as possible, but as you remove fat, you remove flavor," Jean said.

She found that by mixing no-fat items with low-fat can improve the taste.

She believes that no-fat mayonnaise tastes okay in sandwiches, but it doesn't taste very good in tuna or chicken salad. Hellman's Reduced Fat mayonnaise contains 3 grams fat per tablespoon. Mix it with the no-fat mayonnaise and add some prepared spicy mustard and pickle relish for a good tuna salad.

Homemade soups can be made by chilling and removing all fat from beef, ham or chicken stock.

Her favorite stock, which she keeps in containers in the freezer, is made by boiling several ham hocks for two to three hours. Pick the meat off and refrigerate. Cool the broth and remove fat. Combine stock and ham in containers and store in the freezer until ready to make bean soup.

Her husband missed snacks and hors d' oeuvres since all his favorite recipes contained fat. Jean searched for some low-fat ways to make tasty snacks. Here are some ideas.

Bugles Baked Snacks (2 grams fat for 40 Bugles) and Snackwell crackers (cracked pepper and wheat) contain no fat. Spread with no fat cream cheese and top with salsa or sliced olives.

You can adapt many of your favorite recipes with lower-fat ingredients and make them healthier.

Jean hasn't noticed any difference in taste or consistency by substituting 2 egg whites in place of 1 whole egg in baking.

Here are a few of her recipes.

NO-FAT DRIED BEEF DIP

Mix 8-ounces no-fat cream cheese
¼ cup sour cream or skim milk to thin cheese
2 slices onion, minced
2 tablespoons horseradish
When blended, stir in:
½ cup finely minced dried beef
Serve on Snackwell's no-fat crackers for a fat-free snack.

LOW FAT SHRIMP DIP

Mix the following in a bowl and refrigerate one hour:
8 ounces no-fat sour cream
¼ cup no-fat mayonnaise
1 small can drained, rinsed, and finely chopped shrimp
2 tablespoons horseradish
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon catsup
Serve with Snackwell's no-fat crackers.

NO-FAT VEGETABLE SALAD

1 can green beans, drained
1 can peas, drained
1 can whole kernel corn, drained
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
1 jar chopped pimentos with juice
½ cup chopped green or red pepper
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¾ cup vinegar

Combine vegetables in a large container and mix. Heat vinegar, garlic, and sugar to dissolve sugar. Pour over vegetables and marinate at least 12 hours. Will keep several weeks in refrigerator. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

LOW-FAT MOIST APPLE CAKE

2½ cups peeled, chopped baking apples
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 egg whites
1½ cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup fresh or frozen cranberries
½ cup chopped pecans or walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray vegetable spray on bottom and sides of large loaf pan. Put wax paper on bottom to make removal easier.

Combine apples, sugar, and oil in medium mixing bowl. Add egg whites, mixing well. Combine dry ingredients and add to mixture, stirring until dry ingredients are moist. Stir in cranberries and walnuts.

Bake 60 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Note: Buy extra cranberries in the fall and freeze them. They don't get soggy.

Cooking For A Happy Heart

In all things...moderation.

That is the secret to a heart-happy diet.

Eating right doesn't mean eliminating the foods you love.

"It's important to keep in mind that food supplies more than calories and fat," says Sara C. Parks, president of The American Dietetic Association. "Food provides you with essential nutrients to keep you healthy. Many people who diet rob themselves of key nutrients, such as calcium, and therefore can be increased risk for diseases such as osteoporosis, hypertension, and cancer.

Here are five tips for a healthier you.

• Eat breakfast — Scientific evidence shows that eating breakfast is associated with lower blood cholesterol levels. In a study of moderately obese women, eating breakfast reduced dietary fat intake and minimized impulsive snacking.

• Select foods from the five food groups — For adults, the recommended number of servings are 2-4 servings of milk and other dairy products; 2-3 servings of meat; 2-4 servings of fruit; 3-5 servings of vegetables; and 6-11 servings of grain.

• Be a smart snacker — studies show that those who eat five or more times a day are slightly thinner and have significantly lower cholesterol levels than those who eat just one or two meals a day. Choose snacks from the Five Food Groups rather than opting for high-calorie, low-nutrient snack foods like chips, cookies, and soft drinks. Try raw vegetables, cheese and crackers, frozen yogurt, popcorn, and fresh fruit.

• Exercise regularly. Studies show that modest exercise two to three times per week for 20 minutes can help burn calories, improve cardiovascular fitness, and make you feel more energetic.

BLACK BEAN AND RICE SALAD

2 cups cooked rice, cooled to room temperature
1 cup cooked black beans
1 medium tomato, seeded and chopped
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese, optional
1 tablespoon snipped parsley
¼ cup light Italian dressing
1 tablespoon lime juice
Lettuce leaves

Combine rice, beans, tomato, cheese, and parsley in large bowl. Pour dressing and lime juice over rice mixture; toss lightly. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 4.

WHOLE WHEAT PIE SHELL

⅔ cup whole wheat flour
⅔ cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4½ tablespoons vegetable oil
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
4 teaspoons warm water

In medium bowl, combine flour and salt; make a well in the center. Combine vegetable oil, lemon juice, and water; pour into well. Stir just until flour is moistened. Form into a ball. Roll between 2 sheets of wax paper into a 12-inch circle. Peel off top sheet of paper. Invert pastry into a 9-inch pie pan; peel off remaining sheet of paper. Fit pastry into pan. Flute edges and prick with fork tines. Refrigerate for 30 minutes. To bake, place in a preheated 425 degree oven until golden, 5 to 7 minutes.

Makes one 9-inch pie shell (6 portions).

Anspach Family

showing at many fairs result in many missed days of school. But she is an outstanding student who takes her homework to fairs and maintains her grade point average.

Although only a sophomore, she has already applied and been accepted at Iowa State University.

Theresa has checked out a lot of colleges that offer a major in veterinary science, and she prefers Iowa because its program specializes in large animals and the school offers more opportunity for Theresa to continue participation in livestock clubs.

"I'm certain, I'll get homesick so far away from home, but there's a lot of adventure in the West," Theresa said.

Her mother said, "I always tell the kids, 'Don't be afraid to try things. You'll never know if you like something unless you try it. If you try and fail, then you'll never need have those what-ifs to nag you."

To educate people and to give them an opportunity to see what an animal feels like, the children take many of their animals to nursing homes, schools, and the rehabilitation hospital where their mother works as part of a pet therapy program.

School classes also visit the Anspachs' compact farm.

A German shorthair pointer, Bo Regard, helps herd sheep and is trained to find missing people. He and Deb are part of a Search and Rescue group with the National Disaster Team. Deb keeps her gear packed at all times to respond to emergency calls. One time, Bo Regard located a drowned victim in a lake.

One weekend each month, the team meets for training such as rappelling off cliffs.

Deb is also an emergency medical technician.

According to the Anspachs, all this family involvement requires team work — not management.

"Even if we have differences, we got to do our part," Theresa said. "During fair season, we are so busy, we don't even have time to argue."

Theresa stands in front of the solar/shade barn that the family raised with an old-fashioned barn raising.

Dave said, "I really need to give Deb the credit for getting the family so involved in 4-H. Even the barn-raising was one of her projects. I'm a typical Dutchman. I say no first and then get talked into doing it.

"I'm glad Deb pushed as much as she did. Otherwise things would be on a much smaller scale and we would not be having nearly as much fun."

Put Your Heart On The Line

(NAPS) — What's the best way to tell your valentine "I love you?" Here's an affectionate look back at the history of Valentine's Day customs.

Then: Some historians trace the custom of sending verses on Valentine's Day to a Frenchman named Charles, Duke of Orleans. Imprisoned by the British during the Battle of Agincourt in 1415, he sent his wife a rhymed love letter on Valentine's Day from his cell in the Tower of London.

During the 1700s, gloves were a popular gift for young men to give their valentines. Wealthy men gave fancy-dress balls to honor their sweethearts. The first commercial Velanetine's Day cards were made in the early 1800s. Many early valentines were hand painted, with satin ribbon or lace trim.

Now: A delightful and novel way to send your sentiments to your valentine this year is with a new service called Send-A-Song. Through the use of a touch-tone phone, you can send a 20-second personalized voice message and an original recording — chosen from a list of almost 200 songs — to your loved one at a specified time. Valentine's favorites are I Just Called to Say I Love You by Stevie Wonder (#2001), I Had To Say I Loved You in a Song by Jim Croce (#2004) and Whitney Houston's I Will Always Love You (#2099).

Customers can place their orders 24 hours a day, seven days a week. And, songs can be delivered immediately for forgetful valentines, or scheduled to be sent up to six months later.

If your intended isn't home, a message will be sent along with an 800 number to call and retrieve the musical greeting. If the line is busy or there's no answer, Send-A-Song calls back repeatedly for several hours. Delivery is guaranteed; if a song can't be delivered, you're given credit to use the services again.

Send-A-Song is not only great for Valentine's Day, but for any occasion, including birthdays, anniversaries, Mother's and Father's Day.

So, this Valentine's Day, you can put your heart on the line, and let the music convey your message. To hear a free recorded explanation of this service or to place an order, call (800) 251-8000.

ANSWER — Jane Sauble of Manheim wanted a recipe for cabbage casserole made with cheese. Thanks to Joyce Maceno, Tyrone, for sending a recipe.

Cabbage, Swiss Cheese, And Noodle Casserole

8 ounces fine egg noodles
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
½ small head cabbage
8 ounces Swiss Cheese

Gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Use a hand grater to shred cabbage and grate cheese (makes about 4 cups cabbage). Toss noodles with cabbage, turn half into two-quart casserole. Sprinkle half the cheese on top. Repeat layers. Cover and bake 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Calories per serving: 183.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

If our old brick farmhouse could talk, I'm sure it would have many tales to tell.

It was built in 1813 when Napoleon Bonaparte ruled France and America was at war with Great Britain. The two story house with a belfry was an elegant house for its time. The corner cupboard with intricately carved lines and butterfly shelves was a masterpiece. A fireplace in the opposite corner of the room also has dentil work.

At one time a bake oven was part of the house but later a large walk-in fireplace with a squirrel-back oven was built as part of the summerhouse. The original "box-locks" remain on all of the doors and most of the windows have bubbles as they are handblown.

The first settlers built a log house in the meadow about 1734. As the farm is surrounded by the Conestoga River, I would suppose they had an abundant supply of fish. Because this area was flooded from time to time, the next house was built on higher ground.

At one time a porch was on two sides of the house and a story is told of a suitor who rode his horse on the porch to gain his sweetheart's attention. Another story says that one door is split down the middle because a drunken man pounded and kicked on it. Because the first owners were Tories their neighbors were suspicious of them and so it is said, they buried their gold in a nearby field — but where?

Within its walls have been all of life-birth and death, joy and sorrow, hard work and play. Now we add our bit of life to the story.

Saying It With Flowers

Long before there was a Valentine's Day, people linked the beauty and fragrance of flowers with ideas of love and romance. The Greeks and Romans had a love story for almost every kind of flower. When Cupid carried a jar of nectar to a council of gods on Mount Olympus, he spilled the nectar, which bubbled up from the earth in the form of roses. The daisy had once been a lovely forest nymph who had sunk into the earth to outwit the pursuits of Vertumnus, the god of spring. Throughout the years, various meanings have been ascribed to flowers, creating a silent language used to convey one's sentiments to others.

Red and pink are customarily the colors to express love and deep affection on Valentine's Day. Of all the flowers, the red rose declares the intensity of love the giver has for the receiver. Red and white roses together signify unity in a relationship.

Although Valentine's Day is a special time for sweethearts, it is also a day to express fond affection for friends and special relatives as well. Flowers other than roses can imply loyalty, innocence, admiration, happiness, and a friendly way to simply say, "You're my buddy." Green foliage added to a bouquet represents hope and the promise of fulfillment. Because California's 560 flower growers produce an abundant variety of flowers in numerous colors, you can express your sentiments through flowers and foliage all year round:

Carnation: Fascination; I'll never forget you (pink); admiration (red); yes (solid); no, sorry I can't be with you (striped).

Chrysanthemum: You're a wonderful friend; cheerfulness; truth; I love you (red).

Daisy: Innocence; loyal love.

Gardenia: You're lovely; secret love.

Orchid: Beauty, refinement; Chinese symbol for many children.

Rose: I love you (red); perfect happiness (pink); unity (red and white together); purity and innocence (white); friendship (yellow).

Snapdragon: Gracious lady.

Stephanotis: Happiness in marriage; desire to travel.

Tulip: Perfect lover; declaration of love (red); hopeless love (yellow).

Fern: Magic; fascination; secret bond of love (maidenhair fern).

Ivy: Fidelity; friendship; affection.

Myrtle: Love; Hebrew emblem of marriage.

Four Steps To Longer Lasting Bouquets

No matter how it's said, you can keep your floral message lasting longer with four easy steps suggested by the California Cut Flower Commission:

1. Use clean vases or containers.
2. Remove all leaves which will be under water in the vase. Submerged leaves will decay and create bacteria, shortening the life of your bouquet.
3. Recut the stems of each flower under running water using a sharp knife. This prevents air pockets from forming which blocks water uptake to the flowers. Recut stems every three days.
4. Add floral preservative, obtainable from your florist, to the vase water. Use the recommended amount for the size of your bouquet.

The Incredible Lake Superior

Noel Grove
National Geographic News Service

I first laid eyes on Lake Superior and the big country around it more than a decade ago. I drowned myself in its pleasures: fishing for trout, hunting for mushrooms, picking berries in its pine-scented air.

On my frequent returns to the lake country along the U.S.-Canadian border, I have been heartened to find that it remains as I first knew it, uncommonly clear, still heavily forested, bathed in exquisite stillness.

You can hear a lynx scream, follow the tracks of wolves hunting deer or sail along rock-strewn beaches without seeing a soul. And you may be awakened in the night, as I was in my sleeping bag, by a woodland caribou - vanished elsewhere at those latitudes - splashing through a quiet inlet yards away. I was grateful for the wakeup; overhead the northern lights flickered, like wind rustling the tent of the sky.

"We Indians feel this lake is alive," said Billy Blackwell, who traces his ancestors to the Ojibwa who loved this land. We sat on the lake's Minnesota shore, listening to waves murmur against the rocks.

"It provided our grandfathers with food to eat, water to drink, water to bathe in," said Blackwell. "It has a soul."

It is easy to understand why the Ojibwa fought the Sioux for rights to Superior's often bitter-cold shores. French Canadians who paddled Superior's mountainous blue waves in brick-bark canoes called it "le lac superieur," simply referring to its location above the better-known Great Lakes Huron and Michigan. Superior it remains, in any translation.

Today some 600,000 people live along the lake's 1,700-mile shoreline, but more than half are clustered in Thunder Bay, Ontario; Duluth, Minn.; Marquette, Mich.; and Sault Ste. Marie, on both sides of the "Soo" locks separating Michigan and Ontario. That leaves plenty of real estate for wildlife, unspoiled views and water so clear that, as one fisherman told me," A mile from shore I just dip out a cupful and drink it."

Superior is the broadest freshwater lake in the world. It could swallow Scotland with 1,300 square miles to spare or tuck within its shoreline New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and most of Connecticut combined. Something waterlogged could sink 1,333 feet at the deepest point.

That's only a quarter as deep as Lake Baikal in Siberia, but the volume of Lake Superior is still awesome. Tipped and emptied like a washbasin, it would cover both North and South America with a foot of water. Those who live on its shores boast about its size as Texans boast about their state, and they complain about the weather as farmers do.

Winters are long, but seem longer because real summer is just a blown kiss. The warmer weather spreads a green blush over land that is 90 percent forested. The rest seems dominated by wildflowers, with riots of lupine, hawkweed and buttercups.

The colder, summer mildness and wild flavor bring millions of visitors. Winter squeezes out all but a sprinkling of skiers and snowmobilers. By October the northland belongs again to the true lake people.

"This country is not for everyone," said Wendy Bell, former mayor of Marathon, midway along the north shore. "It's expensive — fuel costs especially — and if you don't like winter, you wouldn't be caught dead here."

While bad weather has sunk ships on Superior, squalls of a different sort have arisen over the lake's future. "Its fresh water is our last major untapped resource," said Todd Kessler of the Inland Sea Society, a citizens group based in Bayfield, Wis. "We shouldn't screw up that one."

Damaging pollution of the other Great Lakes has bred concern for Superior. An International Joint Commission, with representatives of both the United States and Canada, has pronounced the lake "relatively pristine."

Rossport came to symbolize for me the enduring charm of the lake country. A couple dozen houses lie scattered against a slope overlooking a sky-blue bay and emerald islands.

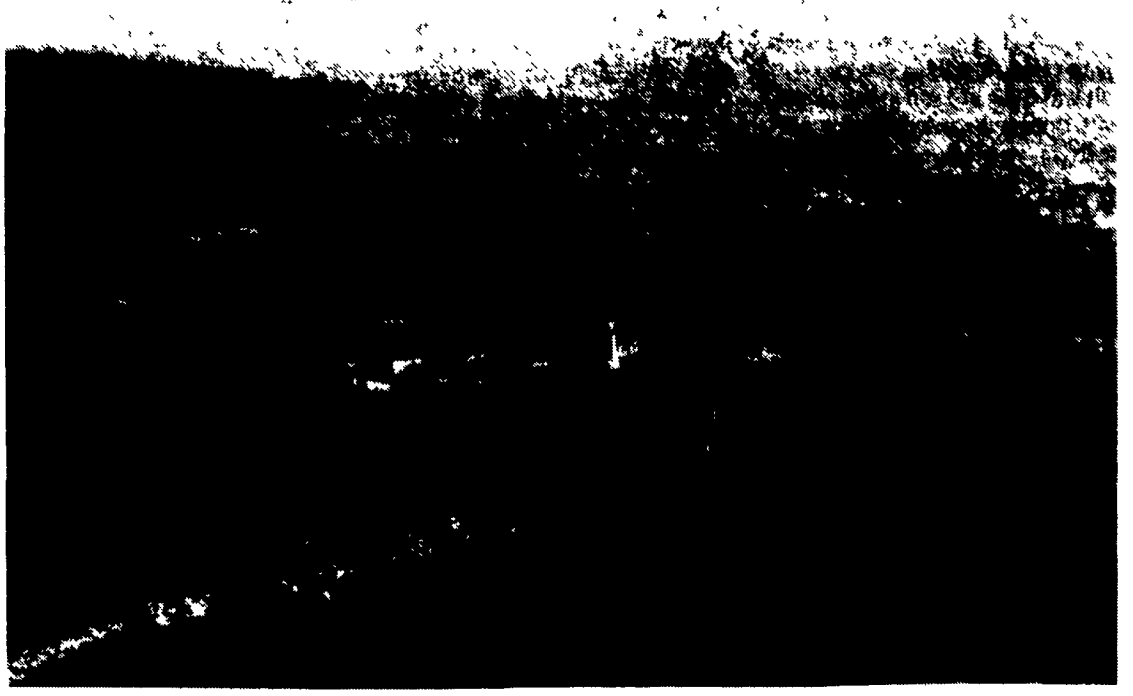
I sailed out of Rossport one August morning on a fishing boat captained by 84-year-old Ray Kenney, retired school principal and lifelong fisherman. First and only "mate" was his wife, Josie, in her early 80s. The other passenger was 96-year-old George Paradise, a retired Iowa judge who has been coming to Rossport every summer for almost half a century.

"My doctor tells me I improve when I come here — lower blood pressure," said the judge, a small man, sun-browned despite the pith helmet that covered him like a parasol.

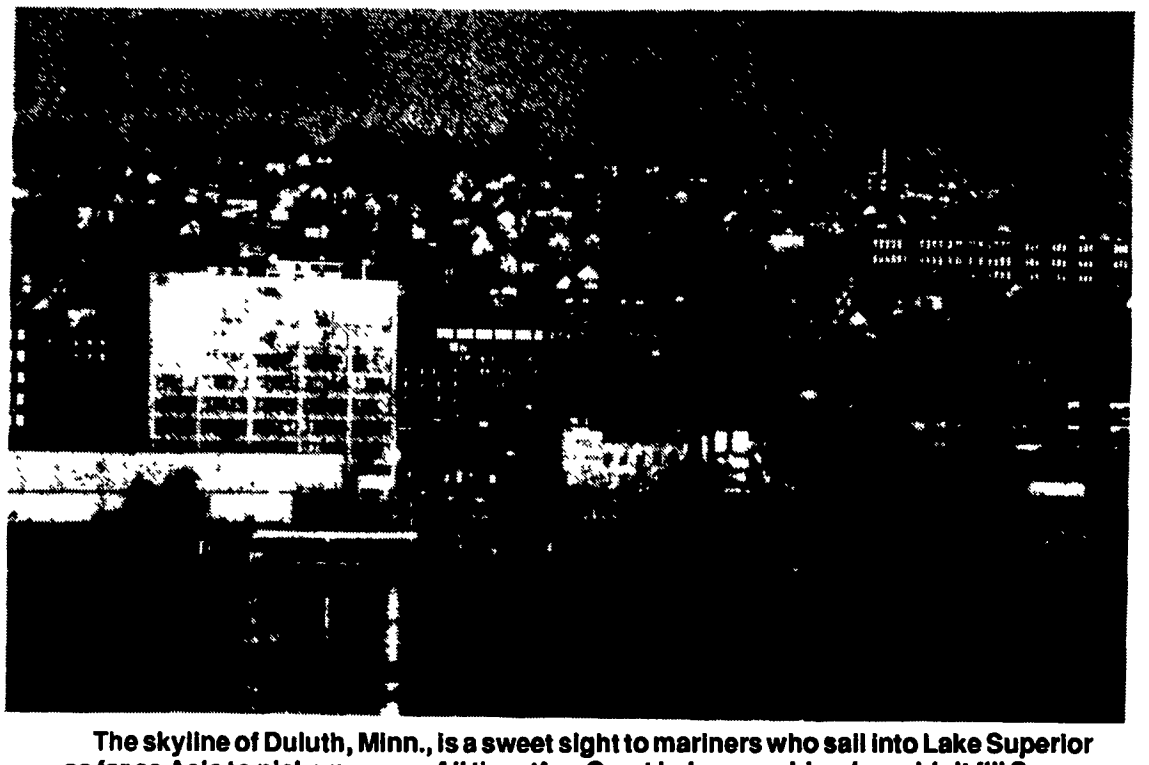
"He and Josie won't admit it, but they're very competitive," Kenney whispered as we trolled over shoals 50 feet below. Josie Kenney struck first with a 7-pound lake trout. The judge answered with 8.5. I reeled in a 6-pounder. In less than an hour we have more than 20 pounds of trout in the icebox.

Superior showed muscle on the trip home, kicking up 5-foot waves that broke over our bow. The judge sat silently in the stern with an impassive Josie Kenney. I chatted with her husband only to hide my own uneasiness. We finally chugged behind the islands near Rossport, the waters grew still and the judge wandered forward, brimming with optimism.

"Over there is Eagle Rock," he said, pointing to a slab of old lava. "I was fishing here one Sunday with an Episcopal priest. He insisted that we have a little church service there, and then he told me to lead it." Proudly he recited his words from that day:



Exposing its gentle side on a frosty December morning, Lake Superior laps at the palisades beneath retired Split Rock Lighthouse on the Minnesota shore. The lake's mood can darken quickly. Gales with 30-foot waves make navigation treacherous. The floor is littered with some 350 shipwrecks.



The skyline of Duluth, Minn., is a sweet sight to mariners who sail into Lake Superior as far as Asia to pick up cargo. All the other Great Lakes combined wouldn't fill Superior, an inland sea that holds a tenth of the world's liquid fresh water.

"Look around you at the hills and trees and the immense quantity of fresh water. Now look overhead at the canopy stretching over everything, a dome without pillars. Nature is the foundation of all religion. And this is as fine a church as any man ever preached under."

Amen, Judge Paradise.

IDEAS TO KEEP YOU WARM ON BLUSTERY COLD DAYS

Bet you're having trouble keeping warm on these frigid cold days. You're problem starving after shoveling driveways, sledding, and fighting snow ball battles.

Sarah Clark of Breezewood has just the right solution for you. She thinks Elephant Stew will warm you and satisfy empty stomachs. You will need an adult to help you.

Make sure you read this complete recipe and understand it before you attempt to make it.

ELEPHANT STEW

1 elephant (medium size)
2 rabbits

Cut elephant into small bite-sized pieces. This takes about 2 months.

Add enough brown gravy to cover. Cook over kerosene fire for about four weeks at 465 degrees.

This will serve 3,800 people. If more people are expected, add two more rabbits to the stew. But add these only if necessary because some people do not like hare in their stew.

Extension Home Economist Reflects On Life And Career

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — For 30 years, Doris Thomas has been writing a column for Lancaster Farming.

"Have You Heard" informs readers about the latest information on nutrition, diet, and textiles.

Because Doris is also the Penn State home economist for Lancaster County Extension, many countians equate her position to mean that she is the professional chief of all home economists.

She is considered the expert on every topic concerning food, nutrition, purchasing, sewing, and crafts.

"Ask Doris Thomas," is the antithesis to any problem consumers might ask from "how do I wash my silk blouse?" to "can I refreeze strawberries after they thaw?"

Whatever the question, Doris knew or researched the answer.

Perhaps, even more than a home economist, Doris was an educator. She taught classes on cooking, dealing with stress, money and time management, home decorating, and more.

"I enjoy teaching and being an educator," Doris said.

"This job allowed me to work with people who wanted to learn and who gave a lot of 'warm fuzzies' that made my job so worthwhile," she said.

"I never aspired to be a career person — it just happened," Doris said of her tenure with the extension.

Unlike today's female executives moving up the ladder, Doris said that she set no career goals and had no chartered plan for her life.

For Doris, doors opened, and she walked through them to enjoy a rewarding profession.

Her life began 65 years ago, when she was born to parents who were in their 40s.

"My parents were great parents, but because they were older, and my grandmother lived with us, things needed to be kept quiet. Because she was an only child, couldn't invite friends to her home, and had no close neighbors, Doris spent many hours reading and playing the piano.

The now petite Doris, said that during those growing up years she was overweight and to her dismay needed to buy her clothing from the chubby department. A teacher guided Doris in setting up a balanced diet that reeducated her "rotten eating habits" and allowed her to lose weight gradually and maintain her weight loss. It was that success in losing weight by proper eating habits that propelled Doris into desiring to become a dietician.

When the time came for Doris to enter college, returning GI soldiers were filling campuses. Doris's father was suspicious of the intent of the GI soldiers, and decided that Doris should attend Hood College, a women's college.

The decision to send Doris to Hood turned out to be a positive experience for Doris who pursued a home economic's degree. That was a popular choice for women in those years. In her sophomore year, Doris decided to teach rather than become a dietician.

The same month that she graduated with honors from college, she married her eighth-grade boyfriend, Charles, who owned an insurance agency.

After 30 years as a professional home economist and columnist, Doris Thomas is retiring.

In that era, it was difficult for a woman to get a job if she was married because employers believed she would soon quit to raise a family.

But Doris was offered a job as a home economist in the Solanco School District.

After two and a half years of teaching, Doris's husband returned to college to finish his degree. Doris quit her job and moved to Philadelphia with him. Prospective employers were even more skeptical of hiring Doris. Not only was she a married woman, but she was married to a student — categorized as being exceptionally transitional.

She was hired as a home economist for UGI. It was her responsibility to visit the homes of those who purchased a gas stove and make sure that they knew how to use it properly. During her two-year stint with UGI, Doris also gave cooking demonstrations.

Then her husband joined the Air Force for four years, during which the couple lived in California, Oklahoma, and Mississippi. Their daughter Debbie was born and Doris did not have an away from home job during those four years.

When the Thomases returned to Quarryville and Charles resumed his job as an insurance broker, Doris's mother came to live with them. Almost immediately, Doris was asked to teach home economics at Solanco High School although she had not applied for the job.

"Since my mother was living with us, there really wasn't a need for two women to keep house, so I decided to go back to work," Doris said.

A few years later, a friend suggested Doris apply for the position as extension home economist. She did. And that is where she found her niche for the next 30 years except for a short sabbatical when she earned her master's degree in business administration.

Doris said, when she first started writing her column for this paper, it was called, "Ladies, Have You Heard?" In the 1960s, she was advised that the title was discriminatory against men so she dropped the "Ladies." She also wrote a column for the local newspaper and gave the same advice on a local radio program.

During Doris's tenure in the extension, she learned to adapt to many changes. In the beginning, her job required her to regularly speak to each individual Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women group that met in the county. She taught sewing classes where as many as 1,800 women would register for free classes.

Policy changes resulted in a charge for the classes that needed to be taught, not by the extension home economist but by extension-taught assistants.

While Doris fulfilled her duties, her husband carried on a valiant three-year struggle against cancer before he died in 1984.

"He was determined to lick it," Doris said of her husband who amazed doctors by rallying many times after he was expected to die. He had throat and lung cancer that, after radical surgery resulted in chronic pulmonary disease. After radiation treatments, he was never able to eat again and needed to be fed by machine as he slept.

The couple's only daughter took care of most of his nursing needs.

"My work kept me sane," said Doris as she recalled the years of watching his six-foot frame shrink to 108 pounds.

By this time, changes in the extension program required her to put more emphasis on nutrition. This change pleased Doris who said, "My main interest always was with foods and nutrition."

The extension developed the Expanded Foods And Nutrition Education Program in order to educate low income mothers on how to shop and cook.

Doris hired nutritional aides to work under her oversight. These aides visit low-income families to give one-to-one help.

In the beginning EFNEP aides taught money management and parenting skills in addition to food preparation. Later, they were instructed to stick to standarized

Vegetable And Fruit Growers Participate In Workshops And Trade Show At 135th Convention

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference and Trade Show and the State Horticultural Association marked its 135-year history with a three-day convention held last week at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center that drew about 1,200.

Packed into the agenda were workshops for growers and industry and exhibits of equipment and products associated with the fruit and vegetable industry.

Patti Levis, executive secretary for the association, said that she remembers when a card table was all that was needed to display exhibits. Now, exhibits fill several rooms in both upper and lower levels at the convention center. Many of those attendance return annually for updates on the industry, but new faces are always interspersed among the crowd.

Carey Dillman of Dillman Farm of Indiana was one of those new faces. He displayed the family's homemade jams, jellies, fruit spreads, and other natural products. Sampling was encouraged.

"Our products are a higher quality because we put more fruit than sugar in them," said Dillman, whose purpose was to sell quantities to orchards, farm markets, and specialty stores.

For the hundreds of growers who attend the event, new and better ways of marketing their products are always uppermost in their minds.

A panel addressed marketing ideas into the next century. The panel was made up of growers who have found success in marketing. John Stark of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture moderated the panel that included Richard Pallman, Pallman Farms of Clarks Summit; Hillary Schramm Jr., Schramms' Farms and Orchards; Keith and Carol Hausman, Coppersburg; and Thomas Sowieralski, S-berry Farms, Frederick.

Pallman said that his family's pick-your-own strawberry operation uses classified ads and word-of-mouth as their only advertisement.

The Hausemans said that their 80-acre farm is a mixture of apples, berris, peaches, and greenhouse tomatoes, for retail, wholesale, and pick-your-own sales. The couple prefers to strive for more retail sales and has found success in setting up farmers markets in parking lots of area shopping centers.

Keith said that the competition is heavy. "But our advantage is that we are defined as a local grower with quality fresh produce. Keep quality there," he stressed.

Carol said that to be successful, this type of marketing requires creative displays. "Don't just stack greens together. Fill baskets, tip one over for interest."

Friendliness most be displayed even when customers are unmatterly. If a child licking an ice cream cone is dripping stickiness and touching the displays, Carol suggests the solution is to say in a friendly tone, "I see you are in a sticky situation," while offering paper towels and water for clean-up.

Schramm said the family's 400-acre farm that grows 35 different fruits and vegetables has seen a change in customers' purchases during the past years.

"Thirteen years ago we sold by the bushel to a mostly rural community," Schramm said. "Now we are in the suburbs where they don't have time to cook."

Ideas to keep competitive, Schramm said, is to offer convenience, entertainment, and education.

Convenience includes offering dairy and bakery items to draw customers. Precut vegetables, husked sweet corn, and directions on how to cook items encourage sales.

An annual pumpkin festival with set-up displays of storybook characters, a cornstalk maze, and school tours has been an excellent drawing card to the market. An apple festival with hayrides to the orchard to pick your own apples, and hot cider with candy and caramel apples sales is proving just as popular. The Schramms also offer a strawberry festival that includes classes on preserving strawberries, pony rides, clowns, face painting, and sales of strawberry milkshakes, sundaes, and pies.

"The strawberry festival was an extreme success. We sold more pick-your-own strawberries than we had for the previous six years," Schramm said. Although the festival was held for only one weekend, the market reaped sales from that event for a month in repeat sales.

The secret to enticing sales is the perceived value that convinces people that your product is a little bit better than the others. One way to do this is to tell a story about your farm and family.

Educate consumers of the healthy benefit of eating fruits and vegetables. Schramm said they laminate reprints from Readers' Digest, newspapers, and periodicals that talk about the health benefits of eating produce. The laminated articles are display above or beside the item sold.

Other activities offered during the convention are tours and luncheons sponsored by the women's auxillary. New officers for the auxillary include Pennsylvanians Mary Sue Shaw, president; Michele Konno, secretary; and Doris Trax, treasurer. Working in conjunction with them are auxillary officers from Maryland: Betty Maphis, secretary; Marge Jacfuss, vice president; and Helen Black, treasurer.

For many exhibitors, the Pa. Vegetable Conference and Trade Show is a family affair. Hope, 3; Leah, 5; and Naomi, 7, join their parents at the Tico Manufacturing display to sell irrigation equipment during the three-day event.

Uniquely flavored fruit spreads, jams, jellies, and butters by Dillman Farm drew crowds for sampling during the Vegetable Conference and Trade Show. Cary Dillman said that this was the first appearance at the annual trade show and considered it a great success.

curriculum that addressed only food concerns.

"We have seen success in failure in this program," said Doris, who believes that teaching money management cannot be separated from preparing wholesome meals.

"You can't teach a mother to eat better and have a better way of life if she doesn't know how to manage her money to do it," she said.

Doris, herself, always attempted to eat nutritionally. Several years ago, it was a shock to discover that her cholesterol level had reached 250. Even her doctor had predicted, "If anyone has low cholesterol, it is you."

He was wrong.

"I decided it was time to practice what I preached so I began reading labels," Doris said.

She was shocked to find the amount of fat in crackers, chips, and ice cream.

"I didn't eat the low-fat ice cream. I ate the rich premium kind once a day," Doris said.

Doris adjusted her eating habits and within six months her cholesterol dropped to 200. A typical breakfast for her includes citrus fruit, 2 pieces of cinnamon toast, and coffee. Lunch is a cup of her homemade soup, some smoked turkey, and fruit.

Dinner is most likely a stir fry made without soy sauce but with chicken broth or white wine and fresh ginger or garlic.

One daily weakness, she said, is eating Lancaster County pretzels, but they aren't high in fat.

Although she primarily sticks to low fat foods, she occasionally indulges in her favorite ice cream.

Although Doris's job has required working many evenings, she found time to be active in her church, and with the Heart Association, where she was president of the Lancaster chapter and is now on the state board.

She hopes to find something to do where she can still use her education skills. She'd like to be a tour guide for the county and even has an offer in the works.

"I'll have to find something to do. I can't stay home or I'll go nuts," she said.

Her friends assure her that she will find plenty to do during retirement. Already she is planning a trip to Florida, time spent with her married daughter and two stepgrandchildren.

Although the transition into retirement causes some trepidation, Doris is not terrified.

"So far in life, doors have opened for me so I figure they will continue to do so," she said.

On March 6 from 2 to 4 p.m., a retirement party will be held for Doris Thomas at the Lancaster Host Resort, 2300 Lincoln Highway East, Lancaster. If you would like to attend, please call (717) 394-6851 or write to 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Is Winter Weather Drying Out Your House?

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Even if there's snow on the ground and the weather is frigid, your home may be drier than a desert this winter, says a housing expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Warm air holds much more moisture than cold air," says Dr. Phyllis Adams-Barner, associate professor of agricultural and extension education. "When the outdoor temperature drops, so does the air's ability to hold moisture. During the heating season, a home's relative humidity can be 15 percent or lower. At this point, the air in a home is drier than that in the Sahara Desert."

Excessive dry air inside your house can affect your health and cause a variety of other problems. "People living in very dry homes may experience sore and raspy throats, dry skin and stuffy noses," Adams-Barner says. "They can feel cold when the temperature indoors registers 70 degrees."

A lack of moisture also affects interior furnishings. "Doors will warp and wooden panels will shrink," she says. "Furniture tends to dry out, crack and shrink at glue joints. You'll receive static electricity shocks when touching metal after walking across a carpet or rug. Also, plants wilt and die more rapidly due to increased evaporation from their leaves."

Relative humidity gauges available in stores will give an accurate reading to within 10 percent. "A relative humidity level of 30 to 50 percent will provide a comfortable home environment," Adams-Barner says. "If your home has a lower relative humidity, consider adding small amounts of moisture to the air."

Moisture can be added to dry air in several ways. "Moisture vapor from a single source travels quickly," Adams-Barner says. "Boiling a teakettle of water on the stove, for instance, will add moisture to the air throughout your house."

Moisture accumulation also results from everyday activities such as bathing, cooking and washing clothes. "If the humidity in your house is too low, don't run an exhaust fan after each bath or shower," Adams-Barner says.

Special products are available to put water vapor into the home's heating system. "Reducing the indoor temperature is another way to increase the relative humidity and increase your comfort," she says. "Portable humidifiers also can do the job, depending on the size of the home."

It may be necessary to add moisture to the air periodically throughout the heating season.

Serve A Valentine Souffle

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — This Valentine's day, take the traditional path to your special Valentine — the sweet tooth. A souffle is an exotic sweet treat for anyone, especially at Valentine's day. This luscious delectable made expressly for that special person will impress and delight ... but they're deceptively simple.

Surprisingly, the perfect souffle is not nearly as elusive as first believed. The following step-by-step strategies will ensure that any cook will be successful with this process.

1. Take a good, long look at the recipe before you start. Organize ingredients and equipment that you will need.

2. Butter and dust every square inch of your souffle dish with sugar. The sugar provides traction for the baking souffle to climb up the slippery sides of the dish.

3. If the unbaked souffle comes to with 1/2 inch of the top of the dish, add a collar. Use a triple thickness of foil to fashion a 4-inch wide band that will go around the dish and overlap 2 inches. Butter the band and dust with sugar. Wrap the collar around the dish, sugared side in, with the edge of the collar extending at least 2 inches beyond the top of the dish; fasten with paper clips. After baking, remove the collar.

4. The best souffle goes to the oven ASAP. If necessary, however, you can refrigerate an unbaked souffle, covered, in the dish for up to 2 hours.

5. By all means, preheat the oven before baking the souffle.

6. You have heard it before: once the souffle is in the oven, do not peek. Nothing de-puffs a baking souffle like a blast of cold air.

7. When is the souffle done? To test, gently move the oven rack. If the souffle jiggles in the center, return it to the oven for a few minutes more baking.

8. Better that your sweetheart should wait for the souffle than your souffle should wait for your sweetheart. If your souffle must wait, however, let it stand in the oven with the heat off for no more than 10 minutes.

9. Camouflage cracks prettily with a dusting of confectioners sugar.

10. Serve your souffle with savvy. Gently break the top crust into portions with two forks held back to back. Spoon out portions. Include some crust with each serving.

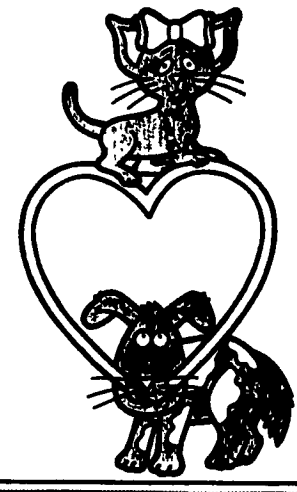
White Chocolate Souffle with Raspberry Cherry Sauce
4 servings

Souffle:
4 egg yolks
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup creme de cacao, divided
5 ounces white chocolate, melted
5 egg whites, at room temperature
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 tablespoons sugar
confectioners sugar

Sauce:
1 package (10 ounces) frozen raspberries in syrup, thawed and drained
6 tablespoons raspberry preserves
1 tablespoon raspberry liqueur, if desired
⅓ cup chopped sweet cherries, well drained

For souffle, beat egg yolks and 3 tablespoons sugar in small mixer bowl until creamy, about 1 minute. Add flour and beat just until blended. Gradually beat in milk and 2 tablespoons creme de cacao. Transfer yolk mixture to a medium-sized heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens; do not boil. Cool mixture until just warm to the touch. Preheat oven to 375°F. Stir melted chocolate into cooled custard. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until foamy. Gradually beat in 2 tablespoons sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Place custard mixture in large mixer bowl. Stir in remaining 2 tablespoons creme de cacao. Gradually, fold in egg whites, ¼ at a time. Pour into buttered and sugared 6-cup souffle dish. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until puffed and just firm to the touch. Dust with confectioners sugar.

Meanwhile for sauce, combine raspberries and preserves in small heavy saucepan. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly; boil 1 minute. Strain to eliminate seeds. Stir in liqueur and cherries. Let stand at room temperature until souffle is baked. Spoon over each serving.



Veal Ambassador Search

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council is currently accepting applications for the 1994 Veal Ambassador/Promotion Assistant Program.

The Veal Ambassador program is designed to provide an opportunity for interested individuals, ages 18-23, to promote veal to consumers at various functions, including retail promotions, health fairs, and mall exhibits from mid May to August 1994. Individuals selected are reimbursed for their time and expenses.

"The Veal Ambassador program is an excellent opportunity for students to gain valuable marketing and sales experience," says David Ivan, executive director of the Beef Council. "If an individual is interested in agriculture and marketing, this program is an ideal work experience."

Interested individuals are asked to send a resume to the Pennsylvania Beef Council office, 4714 Orchard Street, Harrisburg, PA 17109, by April 1. Additional information can be obtained by calling the Beef Council at (717) 545-6000.

The Veal Ambassador program is part of a coordinated veal marketing plan funded by producers through the $1 per head checkoff program.

Valentines From The Kitchen

Let your children help you make and serve Valentine's from the kitchen. Here are some ideas to get you started:

• Heart shaped french toast. Cut hearts from bread with a cookie cutter. Tear left over bread in pieces for stuffing and freeze for later use.

• Heart shaped cheese for snacks. Using a small cookie cutter, cut hearts out of processed cheese slices or thinly sliced cheese. Left over cheese can be used for a cheese sauce or macaroni and cheese.

• Heart shaped cookies. Make sand tarts and cut into heart shapes. After cookies are baked and cooled, dip one side into a thin icing of water and confectioners' sugar. Place cookies on wax paper to catch any drips. Icing dries to a glossy shine. Icing color can be red or shades of pink. (For busy families, save time and make dough one night and then roll out, bake and decorate the next.)

• Heart shaped meatloaf. Form and bake meatloaf in a heart shaped cake pan. Add a little catsup for a garnish and you can tell your loved ones that my heart bleeds for you!

Today's successful growers work harder than ever before — but they also work smarter. They also know that W-L alfalfas are backed up by over 25 years of research, technical teams of experts and a reliable, service-oriented distribution system.

You can't buy better alfalfa seed than W-L — you can't afford to buy less.

Deicing Materials Can Harm Plants

Over the years the amount of salt and related deicing materials used for roads and walks has increased. For example, heavily traveled highways receive 40 to 80 tons of salt per lane mile per year during heavy snow seasons.

Excessive salt amounts may injure plants. Salt may accumulate in the soil near the root system. Salt harms plant's root systems even when the ground is frozen. This happens when salt-laden snow and ice are moved from walks, drives and streets onto lawns and landscape beds. Rock salt absorbs much of the water that would normally be available to roots. Even when soil moisture is adequate, large amounts of salt can cause a drought-like condition in the soil.

Overall, plants vary greatly in their tolerance to high concentrations of salts. Shrubs that are sensitive to high salts in the soil include roses, hollies, cotoneaster, podocarpus, photinia, and viburnum. Moderately tolerant shrubs include pivet, juniper, pyracantha, boxwood and taxus. Euonymus has good tolerance to salt.

Trees that are sensitive to high calcium chloride salts include the American elm, basswood, red and white pine, hemlock, red and sugar maples and shagbark hickory. Moderately tolerant trees include Austrian and pitch pines, birch, red and white oak, black cherry, white ash and poplar.

Trees with good tolerance include Russian olive, thornless common honey locust, Japanese black pine and black locust.

Airborne salt may also become a problem. When salt is deposited on plant parts, buds and small twigs of some species can lose their cold hardness, and they are more likely to suffer winter injury. Evergreen plants are particilar susceptible.

PREVENTION

The best way to prevent salt injury to plants is to avoid their use around landscape plants. When possible, use calium chloride to melt ice. It costs more than common rock salt, but it is far less toxic. When salting areas near shrubbery and trees use up to one half pound of rock salt or calcium chloride per square yard of surface. Don't be tempted to apply more unless it is actually needed. Also, allow time for the material to work properly.

DEICING ALTERNATIVES

Gypsum, or calcium sulfate may be used in conjunction with sodium chloride to reduce plant injury. Gypsum also helps relieve soil compaction caused by salt. Fertilizers can also melt ice and snow. A large amount of fertilizer is needed to achieve the same affect as calcium chloride. For example, urea fertilizer will melt ice and snow when surface temperatures are above 11 degrees Fahrenheit. Urea can be applied at rates of 10 pounds per 100 square feet. This will also supply about 4.5 pound of nitrogen per each 100 square feet area.

Complete fertilizers also provide melting and traction materials. The nitrogen and potash in fertilizers serve as melting agents, and the phosphate, generally in the form of superphosphate, will provide traction. Two to three pounds per 100 square feet will help control ice and snow accumulation.

Sand, cinders, sawdust, ash or lights gravel can all improve safety for pedestrians and vehicles. Combine these materials with a melting chemical for faster melting. For example, sawdust can be combined with calcium chloride for fairly-lasting sidewalk control of ice and snow. Over the years, Penn State has tried a mixture of one part calcium chloride and three parts sawdust. It can be hand-mixed when needed and applied with a small shovel. The absorbent sawdust holds the calcium chloride while it provides traction. The mixture remains on the surface well and can be swept in the morning. Rain also helps to dispense and flush sodium in the soil

I discovered America in 1987.

Bob Weaver, Lancaster, PA

"I've been planting America's Alfalfa for five or six years. One thing I see is that America's Alfalfa lasts a lot longer than Pioneer® brand alfalfa, especially when you're trying to get four or five cuttings. It also has better potato leafhopper yellowing resistance than Pioneer.

I planted Aggressor last year on low ground. Even though this spring was very wet, we didn't see any yellowing and had a super crop. We've also had good results with Apollo Supreme, which we've been planting for years. Our haylage tested 21 percent protein last year and 22 percent this year.

America's Alfalfa is competitively priced, as far as I'm concerned. For the quality of alfalfa being as good as it is, it's still priced in a range that everyone can afford."

AGCO ALLIS
6600 SERIES TRACTORS

OPERATOR FRIENDLY

The AGCO Allis 6600 Series row crop tractors are engineered to put you comfortably in control. In addition to a comfortable cab or a platform and ROPS, you get low maintenance, low operating costs and a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty.

- Trouble-free, air- and oil-cooled engine. The 6600 Series tractors are equipped with low-maintenance, 4-cylinder, air- and oil-cooled diesel engines. The 6670 provides 63 PTO hp and the 6680 73 PTO hp, both with 22% torque rise. The 6690 has a turbocharged 81 PTO hp engine that delivers a 28% torque rise, as well as the best fuel economy in its class.
- Many speed choices. The synchropower transmission with a separate synchro-reverser offers 12 forward and 12 reverse speeds, planetary final drive and a self-adjusting, hydraulically-actuated clutch. An optional creeper transmission provides 16 forward and 16 reverse speeds; a dual speed option has 24 forward and 12 reverse and a power Hi-Lo transmission provides 30 forward and 30 reverse speeds. All tractor models are available as either 2WD or AWD.
- PTO power and versatility. The independent PTO operates at 540/1,000 rpm with 6- and 21-spline shafts and has a hydraulically-actuated wet PTO clutch. The Category II/I 3-point hitch has a convenient rear remote control and is equipped with telescopic stabilizers. Optional telescopic lower links are also available.
- Quality performance and comfort. The 6600 Series tractors ride on premium Goodyear radial tires. They have hydrostatic power steering, a tilt-telescopic steering wheel, hydraulically-actuated wet disc brakes and a mechanically-actuated differential lock. AWD models have four-wheel brakes for 40% better braking and an operator controlled front differential lock for tighter turns. All operated from the comfort of the enclosed cab.

To experience the user-friendliness of the 6600 Series tractors, or any of the "orange" line of AGCO Allis tractors ranging from 40 to 128 PTO hp, stop by or call us soon.

FPPF Polar Power
Keeps Your Diesel Running In The Worst Winter Cold!

Fuel filters, separators do nothing to keep diesel fuel from the waxing or gelling that blocks up and clogs fuel lines and filters.

FPPF Polar Power contains FPPF's Fuel Power and FPPF's Polarized Diesel Fuel Flow Improver, the industry's leaders. It will keep your diesel running in the worst winter cold: lowering the pour-point, totally dispersing water, eliminating gum/varnish...outperforming all other additives and at lower cost.

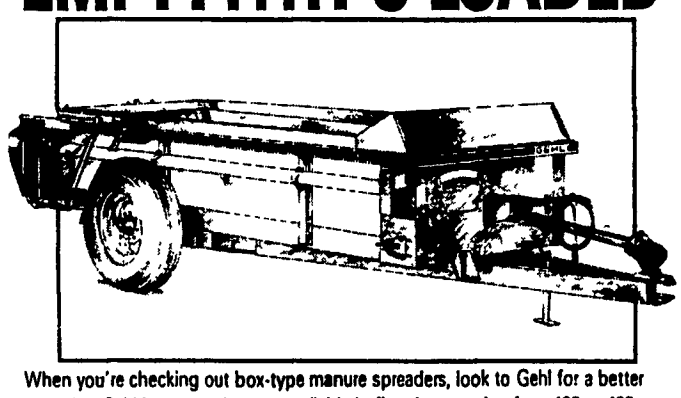
GEHL

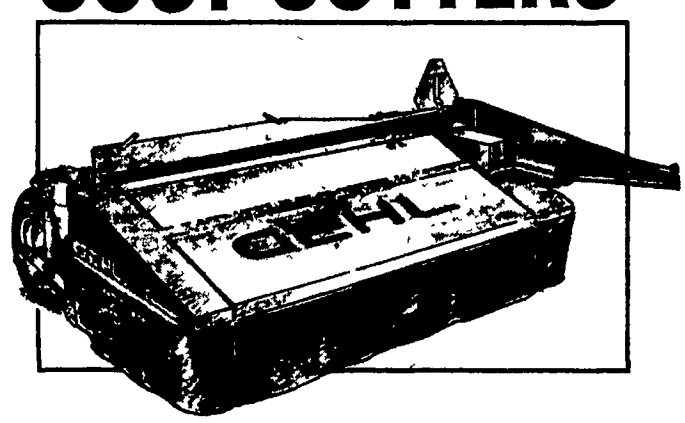
EVEN WHEN IT'S EMPTY...IT'S LOADED



When you're checking out box-type manure spreaders, look to Gehl for a better spreader! Gehl box spreaders are available in five sizes ranging from 135 to 425 bushel heaped capacities. Gehl box spreaders deliver these and many more advanced features:

- Gehl-Tuff flooring is slippery so manure slides out easily
- T-bar apron chains are extra-strong for durability.
- Galvanized steel sides are more corrosion resistant
- Single or tandem axle models available.
- 10-year warranty on sides and floors
- Hydraulic apron drive (optional) to match your specific application needs.

COST CUTTERS



Gehl has two all-new disc mower conditioners to cut your crop down to size, fast and easy. The DC2340 has 7 discs and a 9 foot cutting width; the DC2360 has 8 discs and a 10-1/2 foot cutting width.

- High speed discs – Each disc has two knives to slice through the toughest crops and conditions; the disc gear drive operates in an oil bath for long life.
- Sturdy frame – Cradles the cutterbar for extra protection and durability.
- 540 or 1,000 rpm driveline with equal-angle hitch for smooth power transfer.
- Standard hydraulic tongue – Makes it easy to position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.

Archaeologists Find Clues To Past

NEWARK, Del. — Not all of the people who send samples to the University of Delaware Soil Laboratory these days are looking for fertilizer recommendations. Some of the lab's biggest customers are archaeologists seeking clues to the past. Indeed, the number of archaeological samples processed in the lab over the past three years is almost equal to the number of fertilizer samples, according to Karen Gartley, soil testing program coordinator.

A number of archaeological firms in Delaware and surrounding states use the university's soil lab services, Gartley says. "For example, we recently received 1,500 soil samples collected from excavations at Historic St. Mary's City, a colonial site in Maryland."

They've also tested thousands of samples from Delaware archaeological digs for the university's Center for Archaeological Research.

"The use of soil tests for archaeological research is still relatively new in this country, though the idea is catching on," says Keith Doms, staff archaeologist and manager of the center's laboratory.

"When we first started doing this, no one at the soil lab was aware of archaeology's use of soil samples. Old Sturbridge Village archaeologists were probably the first ones in the United States to do this in the early 1980s," he says. "In Europe they've been using them since the early 1970s to help interpret early Iron Age sites."

The center ran its first samples through the university soil lab back in 1984-85 while investigating the 19th century Wilson-Slack farm site near the intersection of Chestnut Hill Road-Route 4 and Route 72 in Newark.

The main elements tested for archaeological purposes are pH, calcium, magnesium, phosphorus and potassium.

"Soil samples are used to help figure out what's going on at a site," Doms explains. "For example, post holes tell us where a fence was, but they don't tell us anything about what the fence was for. Was it around a garden? The soil's likely to be higher in calcium. Was it around a pig sty? There'll be high phosphates in the soil.

"Normally we take two sets of samples — one from the plow layer and one from undisturbed subsoil — and compare them to see what differences exist," he continues. "At many of the sites we're excavating, there's no standing structure and the land has been farmed for many years. There's usually a very close approximation between the plow zone and the subsoil. It's the discrepancies that are interesting.

"This is a learning process," Doms says. "We're still exploring the uses of soil tests. Most of the archaeology that has brought us in contact with the soil lab is in fulfillment of regulations of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966. Most of the work is commissioned by DelDOT and relates to highway construction where federal moneys are involved, so an environmental impact report must be filed. This includes cultural as well as physical and environmental impact. The center also does pure research archeology."

Over the past 12 years, the center has excavated a number of tenant farms, two general stores, a blacksmith shop, a wheelwright shop, a colonial tavern, one owner-operated farm and four urban dwellings, as well as 10 pre-historic sites. Most of the soil samples collected from those sites were tested in the College of Agricultural Sciences.

There's Still Time To Sign Up For Youth Contest At Pork Congress

to Bruce Lemmon, Cumberland Valley High School ag instructor, who chairs the competition.

"The junior public speaking event is open to any youth ages 8 to 19," said Lemmon. As of press-time, about a dozen have signed up for the event, which begins at 9:30 a.m. at the start of the Congress in the Main Hotel Complex.

The public speaking contest is comprised of two separate events. The first, at 9:30 a.m., is open to youth ages 12-15 and 16-19. Youth ages 8-11 compete at 12:30 p.m.

Contestants are allowed to speak on a variety of selected topics. Each speech must be at least three minutes long and no longer than five.

Youth must choose from the following topics: "Humor In the Pigpen," "Pigs In Harmony With the Environment," "Animal Rights/ Animal Welfare — What Can I Do?" or "Pork 2000 — The Future of the Industry."

"The subject material can be pretty vague," said Lemmon. "Usually, they're judged on how well they respond."

According to Lemmon, judges look at the "two biggest things — poise and presentation." How well the contestants understand their subject material, and how articulate they are about it, is also judged.

Judges for this year's contest include Nancy Lou Tallman, Tallman Aerial Spraying, Dauphin, and Fred Dillner, retired ag instructor, Shippensburg.

Contestants are also asked questions regarding the subject after the speech.

Last year, according to the contest chair, there were 17 participants, with many in the 8-11 age category. Although a dozen signed up at presstime, there is still time to sign up.

In the late 1970s, the public speaking event was held during the Farm Show, and was moved, in the mid-1980s, to the Congress. Mollie Geise, Northumberland, who chaired the event until 1992, said the contest "had some excellent young people giving their speeches."

She said the contest gave youth, at a tender age, the courage and leadership to become successful in endeavors later in life.

For more information and to sign up for the contest, call Lemmon at the Cumberland Valley High School Ag Department, (717) 766-0217, ext. 418.

At last year's Keystone Pork Congress, 21 youth competed. Junior division winner was Rachel Houston, 9, daughter of Sandra and Laurence Houston, Templeton, who spoke about humor in the pig pen.

Intermediate winner at last year's contest was Adrienne Elkin, 15, daughter of Sam and Paula Elkin, Marion Center, who spoke about animal rights and animal welfare.

MoorMan's MaxLean™. The lean gain program that's already produced over 3.5 billion pounds of leaner pork.

MoorMan's MaxLean Program featuring advanced formula MaxLean MVP™

MOORMAN'S® MAX LEAN™ SWINE PROGRAM

MoorMan's MVP has stood for Maximum Value Pork since 1986. In that time, more than 20 million MVP fed hogs have gone to market faster, leaner and more profitably.

Now MVP is even better. Advanced formula MaxLean MVP swine concentrate is joined by a full-line lean gain program. Including MaxLean Pack for premixes and concentrates, or MaxLean Completes. All are designed to maximize lean gain. Your MoorMan's Representative is eager to help you put even leaner pork on America's tables.

MoorMan's

Pork and hog figures based on pounds of Formula MVP sold, amount required per hog to market weight, and standard carcass weight.

PRICE OR VALUE?

There's a big difference–whether it's a feed or anything else you buy.

We've never cut corners to make a feed cheap–in its quality or its selling price per ton.

Instead, we make all MoorMan's products to high-quality, high-performance standards in every step all the way through research, formulation, ingredient selection and manufacturing.

For example, super-concentrated MoorMan's Premix-trate® products for hogs fully fortify soybean meal and grain to make a wide variety of rations for top performance and economical feeding results.

Total feed cost to do a job, we're convinced, is more important than the price per ton you pay for a small part of your total ration.

MoorMan's

Call today to find out how MoorMan's MaxLean™ Swine Program can help you get maximum lean from your herd.

MOORMAN'S® MAX LEAN™ SWINE PROGRAM

RESEARCH PROVEN—BEFORE YOU BUY IT

When a new feed ingredient or idea comes out, MoorMan's doesn't automatically "jump on the bandwagon".

We avoid offering you anything new without first proving it with our own research animals in carefully conducted tests.

Then we test it further in Field Research on farms of cooperating hog raisers with their animals.

We want to make sure anything new improves animals' performance–and can do it profitably for you–before we put it in a MoorMan's feed product.

Often we aren't the first to offer something new, but when we do, you can depend on it being research proven.

For the third time in a row, at last year's Keystone Pork Congress, Lebanon County won the Keystone Pork Bowl, 160-80, over Berks County. Team members included Jason Krall, Katie Lefever, Jon Harnish, and Brian Kreider.

Second place at the 1993 Congress was the Berks County team, coached by Pat Hunter. Team members were Jason Keller, Eric Keller, Richard Kerper, Jr., and Leon Hunter.

Third place last year went to Mifflinburg FFA, coached by Mike Sanders. Members were Matt Christ, Lucas Criswell, Derrick Moyer, and Daryl Ebersole.

This year's Congress will feature a trade show with 39 exhibits and educational seminars for producers.

David Meisinger, a consulting animal scientist from Illinois and former director of research for the National Pork Producers Council, will speak on "The Road to Carcass Value and Lessons Along the Way." Dr. Tom Wetzel, a private veterinarian from Wells, Minn., will address porcine reproductive and respiratory syndrome (PRRS).

Joe Leathers, from the National Pork Producers Council, will update the audience on the current issues facing the pork industry.

Lou Moore, Penn State professor of agricultural economics, will deliver his hog market outlook mixed with insight and humor.

Doug Beegle will discuss the state's Nutrient Management Law and how it will affect individual operations.

Intermediate winner at last year's Pork Congress was Adrienne Elkin, 15, daughter of Sam and Paula Elkin, Marion Center.

Also, two producer panels will provide perspectives on contract production and marketing.

Following the educational seminars, the third annual Legislative Activity Fund Auction will take place during the Pork Buffet and Awards Program.

Last year, at the awards banquet, several were recognized for their contributions to the industry. They were Allen Hinkel, selected as All-American, to represent the state at the World Pork Expo in Iowa; Michelle Voneda, Mackeyville, an 11-year 4-H'er and sophomore in dairy and animal science at Penn State; and John Risser, coach of the first-place Lebanon Keystone Pork Bowl, FFA award.

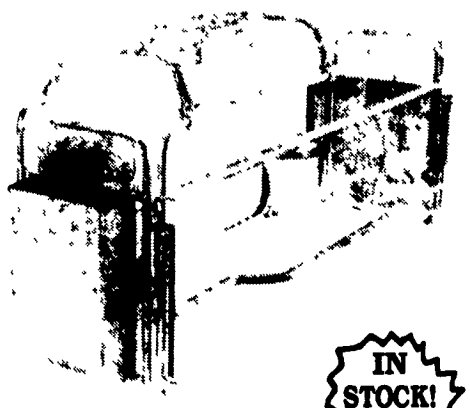
Prevent Piglet Crushing

with the

MODEL 90 FARROWING CRATE



BSM

Constructed from heavy gauge materials, this crate is designed to reduce crushing with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars make for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminate the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

Penn State Livestock Judging Team Completes Successful Season

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Following a very competitive spring, which saw Penn State garner numerous awards at the North Central/Southeastern Livestock Evaluation, Selection, and Judging Contest (including second team in judging and second team overall in the 3-day combined scoring), seven highly motivated and dedicated undergraduate students eagerly returned to Penn State in August for a chance to represent Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science at several regional and national livestock judging contests during the fall.

Team members included: Brian Beam, a dairy and animal science major from Elverson, Chester County; Brian Miller, a dairy and animal science major from Knox, Clarion County; Julie Mikesell, a health policy and administration major from Marion Center, Indiana County; Doug Musser, a dairy and animal science major from Elizabethtown, Lancaster County; Amy Smith, an accounting major from Windsor, York County; Fred Weaver, a dairy and animal science major from Ephrata, Lancaster County; and Henry Zerby, a dairy and animal science major from Beavertown, Snyder County. The team was coached by Keith Bryan, instructor in animal science.

Penn State First At Eastern States

The fall livestock judging season began on Saturday, Sept. 18, at the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Mass.

Following only three weeks of practice at the Penn State beef cattle, sheep and swine farms, and precontest workouts that included Centre County Grange Fair (market steers, hogs, and lambs) in Centre Hall, Pa., and Rally Farms (Angus cattle) and Twin Silos Farm (Suffolk sheep) in Millbrook, N.Y., the team was well prepared for competition.

Penn State finished first in beef cattle judging and oral reasons. Penn State also finished first in sheep judging and second in swine judging. They outscored Virginia Tech, Delaware Valley College, and West Virginia to finish first overall.

In individual categories, Penn State team members finished with several noteworthy placings, including five of the top ten individuals overall. Doug Musser led the team by finishing second overall. He was third in sheep judging, fourth in beef cattle judging, and seventh in oral reasons. Doug's performance was followed closely by four teammates, with only seven points separating second through eighth places.

Julie Mikesell finished in fourth place overall, just one point ahead of teammates Henry Zerby and Brian Miller in fifth and sixth places, respectively. Julie finished third in swine judging, fourth in sheep judging, and sixth in oral reasons. Henry Zerby finished as high individual in beef cattle judging and received a watch from the American Angus Association. He also finished fifth in oral reasons and eighth in sheep judging. Brian Miller also had a consistently good day, finishing second in beef cattle judging, fifth in sheep judging, and ninth in oral reasons. Fred Weaver rounded out the top five placing Penn State contestants by finishing eighth overall. Fred garnered second place in swine judging and third in oral reasons.

Brian Beam and Amy Smith both contributed to the team's success with consistent placings and oral reasons.

Penn State Competes At Mid-South Fair

The second contest of the season took place on Saturday, Sept. 25, at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis, Tenn.

Ever since their second place finish at the North Central and coming off a strong win at Eastern States, the team decided to forego the Eastern National contest in Timonium and test their skills in the south. The trip to Memphis gave the students a unique opportunity to view a segment of animal agriculture that was considerably different from what they had been accustomed to seeing.

Following a precontest workout at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. (Hampshire and Dorset sheep; Angus and Brangus cattle) and a short trip to the deep south to view Hereford cattle at EE Hereford Ranch in Winona, Miss., the team was ready for competition.

A total of 13 teams competed in the Memphis contest and Penn State earned a respectable sixth-place finish, only 14 points out of third place. Team members had a consistent day both in placings and reasons. The notable exception was that Henry Zerby finished seventh overall, in a very competitive contest. The team finshed third in beef cattle judging and also finished fifth in swine judging.

After a grueling 18-hour return drive to campus, the team had a few days to catch up on some of their studies, do laundry, and prepare for their "home contest" at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE).

Again, Penn State Second at Home (Keystone International)

Most years, the trip to Harrisburg is less than eventful; however, this year's team made a point of stopping to practice prior to the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE).

Precontest workouts included a stop at Beavertown to visit one of White Oak Mills' Pro Genetics grower units, and a chance to stop and view Angus cattle at South Branch Farms in York.

On Saturday, Oct. 2, the Penn State Livestock Judging Team continued a very successful season by capturing second-place honors at the Keystone International Collegiate Livestock Judging Contest. After scoring 4,518 points out of a possible 5,000, the Penn State team remained a mere 18 points out of the top spot held by the University of Illinois (4536).

Several members of the Penn State team got into the limelight with tremendous performances that helped the team to finish in the top two places in every category.

In beef cattle judging, Doug Musser and Fred Weaver finished "one-two," respectively, and Henry Zerby finished 10th as Penn State garnered second in beef. In swine judging, Brian Beam and Henry Zerby made the second Penn State tandem to sweep a species as they finished first and second, respectively, and Julie Mikesell garnered sixth place, and again the Penn State team finished second.

Things were somewhat different in sheep judging as Henry Zerby led the team with a second place finish, and teammates Fred Weaver and Brian Miller finished fourth and eighth, respectively. With three of the top ten places, but not the high individual in the species, Penn State went on to finish first in sheep judging.

As has been the case in the past for many contests, individual performance and total team score in oral reasons proved to be the deciding factor in the outcome of Keystone contest. Penn State finished second in oral reasons with four of the top ten individuals: Henry Zerby, second; Fred Weaver, fifth; Doug Musser, seventh; and Brian Beam, tenth.

In the final overall tally, Penn State team members garnered three of the top 10 spots. Fred Weaver and Doug Musser finished seventh and eighth, respectively, and Henry Zerby emerged victorious as high individual overall.

Ohio State Workout

In order to avoid a potential setback of not judging in a contest for a five-week period leading up to the American Royal and North American contests in early November, the Penn State team packed their bags and headed to Columbus, Ohio, for a practice contest during the third weekend in October.

The weekend began on Friday, Oct. 22, with a workout featuring Simmental cattle at the farm owned by Lynn and Karen Holley in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Following lunch, the team was treated to a good practice judging Suffolk sheep at George Brothers.

Steve and Heidi George showed the team several replacement ewe lambs and a yearling ewe that was as good a sheep as any around. On Saturday, team members judged 12 classes and gave eight sets of oral reasons.

Although there weren't any awards, and scores were not tallied formally, the contest situation gave students the opportunity to view more livestock.

Prior to returning to Penn State on Sunday, the team stopped at Riverwood Farm in Powell, Ohio, to judge Polled Dorset sheep. The practice worked extremely well for the team as reasons were given in the van on the way home.

American Royal Difficult For Penn State

A total of 25 teams and 125 contestants competed at the American Royal Livestock Judging Contest on Nov. 9, in Kansas City, Mo.

Following precontest workouts at Fink Beef Genetic Systems (Angus cattle) and Kansas State University (beef cattle, sheep and swine) in Manhattan, Kan.; Glenkirk Farms (Angus, Hereford and Polled Hereford cattle) in Maysville, Mo.; and at Burke and Farao Farms (Suffolk and Hampshire sheep) in Platte City, Mo.; the team was anxious to compete against the finest from the Midwest.

Just as in years past, the American Royal contest proved to be difficult for teams from east of the Mississippi River. This year was Buy an ACO Ad-lib Feeder.

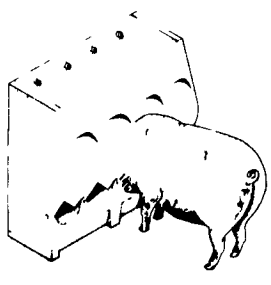
Or buy a bucket.



It took six years of research, and over 7000 separate measurements involving pig behavior to develop the ACO Ad-lib Feeder. Which is why it's the only feeder proven to redeuce feed wastage to less than 2%, and aggression in the pen by up to 60%.

Curved partitions make fouling virtually impossible. And specially designed agitators keep a perfect flow of feed, be it pellet or meal.

From 11lb nursery pigs to 265lb market hogs, there's a precision-cast ACO Ad-lib Feeder to fit your pig.

And, depending on your feed cost, the amount you save on wasted feed will have paid for your feeder in just nine months.

So, next time you're buying a feeder, make sure it's an ACO. Otherwise you might as well be buying a bucket.

Kubota Powers Screening Plant

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Expanding upon the one- power-source- efficiency philosophy, Kubota is pleased to announce another Kubota-powered OEM's product, The Shaker Buddy Mixer™ for the construction and landscape markets.

The Shaker Buddy Mixer™ is a portable, one-man, screening plant that provides outstanding quality at an affordable price.

Anyone who purchases screened materials (top soil, sand, gravel) or has a need to separate materials will quickly earn back the cost of The Shaker Buddy Mixer™.

The Shaker Buddy Mixer™ is compact — one person can tow it to the job site on a one-ton truck, set it up in two minutes, and change the screen in about 10 minutes using hand tools. It can process a yard of material in less than 20 seconds.

Excavators, pipeline contractors, landscape contractors, sweeping contractors, and other contractors do not have to purchase additional equipment in order to use The Shaker Buddy Mixer™. Its compact size (loading height of 6 feet) accommodates all skid steers, backhoes, excavators or small tractor loaders — any loader with a bucket sized up to one cubic yard.

Like the Kubota engine that powers it, The Shaker Buddy Mixer™ is a rugged powerhouse. Its wearing surfaces are ¾ inch plate steel. Plus it does not depend on feed belts or hoppers that clog when screening wet or sticky materials.

Time is not wasted waiting on delivery of screened materials nor for reworking if the material is screened improperly. The contractor has more control over his job as The Shaker Buddy Mixer™ is available with more than 500 different screen sizes.

North American Challenging For Penn State

After returning from the Amerı-n Royal, the Penn State team had ıst enough time to catch up on class work before departing for the North American International Livestock Exposition Judging Contest in Louisville, Ky.

Precontest practices included judging Polled Hereford and Angus cattle at Stockdale Farm in Dayton, Pa., and Angus cattle at McKean Brothers in Mercer, Pa. Once in Ohio, the team practiced judging swine at Isler's Durocs and Yorkshires in Prospect, Ohio, and at Bentley's Durocs and Hampshires in Sabina, Ohio. They also judged market lambs at The Ohio State University Sheep Farm in Columbus.

In Kentucky, the final practices of the season included judging Limousin cattle at Shadwell Limousin in Lexington, Hampshire and Dorset sheep at the University of Kentucky, and Shorthorn cattle at Stonelea Farm in Prospect, Ky.

Thirty-eight teams and 182 contestants from across the country competed in the National Contest on November 15th. The team performed admirably and finished 14th in sheep, 18th in beef cattle, 20th in swine (11th in Yorkshires; 14th in performance classes), 19th in oral reasons, and finished 17th overall.

Elmood-Wulf Entries Yard Show Champions

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — When cattle farmers made their way through the National Western Yards this year, they found one of the stoutest groups of Limousin bulls ever exhibited there.

All told, 26 pens and four carloads paraded for the recent show. Judges for the event were Andy Bailey, Hiko, Nevada; Dr. Dave Nichols, Kansas State University; and Jim Theeck, Brenham, Texas.

Elmwood Limousin of Iliff, Colo. stood atop of the pen show. Their grand champion pen included February '93 sons of YKCC New Design 443 and Mr. SY Power Hitter 313X. The bulls weighed an average of 995 pounds, with an average WDA of 3.03 pounds and average frame score of 6.4.

Peterson's L7 Bar Limousin of Pukwana, S.D. had the reserve grand champion pen with March '93 sons of Chief Red Cloud 900X and Wulf's Challenger 6044Y. The bulls weighed an average of 972 pounds with an average WDA of 3.22 pounds and average frame score of 7.1.

Hunting for the top spot in the carload show as just as competitive. Wulf Limousin Farms of Morris, Minn. emerged with the grand champion. The winning carload included March and April '93 sons of Wulf's Challenger 6044Y, Wulf's Rambler 8400X, Wulf's Gold Rush 6510X and Wulf's Businessman 714W. The bulls weighed an average of 964 pounds with an average WDA of 3.35 pounds and an average frame score of 7.0.

Cane Ridge Cattle Company of Paris, Kentucky had the reserve grand champion carload with February and March '93 sons of Cane Ridge Polled Summit, Polled Silverstone 7089Y, Wulf's Rambler 8400X and Wulf's Homerun 9226A. The bulls weighed an average of 992 pounds with an average WDA of 3.21 pounds and an average frame score of 7.0.

Cross Flow Fan Among AE 50

RACINE, Wis. —. A major parts innovation for Case International Axial-Flow® combines — the Cross Flow™ fan — has been named among the Agricultural Engineering 50 as one of 1993's most outstanding innovations in product or systems technology.

A panel of national engineering experts chosen by Agricultural Engineering magazine reviewed nominations from component suppliers, equipment manufacturers and systems developers representing many different industries. According to the magazine, the panel selected developments that "embodied the application of new technology or the innovative application of an older technology" and would make "worthwhile contributions to the advancement of engineering technology."

The Case International Cross Flow™ fan technology involves tapering the fan blades to form a patented Chevron pattern, which enables the air coming from the blades to penetrate the sieve area evenly. "The angled blades are always in contact with the fan cutoff and serve to slice the air, making for smooth, quiet operation and reduced vibration and horsepower requirements," said Gerry Salzman, Case product manager-combines. "The fan reduces noise and also significantly reduces the need for cleaning system adjustments found on other designs."

Leaders Seek Water Quality Solutions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmer cooperative leaders teamed up with business, government, and non-profit leaders recently to convene the National Forum on Nonpoint Source Pollution.

At the opening session of this year-long effort, Forum members were charged with ratifying a charter and providing direction to special work groups responsible for developing recommendations for the Forum's consideration.

The goal of the Forum, established by the National Geographic Society and The Conservation Fund, is to develop, implement, and communicate to the public innovative, non-regulatory solutions for nonpoint source pollution based on market incentives, voluntary initiatives, and education. Principle sources of nonpoint source pollution include water runoff from farms, city streets, residential lawns, parking lots, and construction sites.

Congress is currently considering Clean Water Act reauthorization legislation that would regulate agricultural nonpoint source runoff for the first time. The national Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC) is committed to finding business-oriented solutions to water quality issues and demonstrating that the unique farmer-cooperative partnership is a willing player in the ongoing search for workable, non-regulatory solutions.

Farmer cooperative representatives on the forum include:

- Glenn Webb, farmer. Webb and his wife, Phyllis, own and operate a 430 acre fruit and livestock farm near Tunnel Hill, Illinois.
- Russell L. Hanlin, president and CEO, Sunkist Growers, Inc. Sherman Oaks, California. Sunkist is a cooperative of 6,500 members in California and Arizona with an average farm size of 40 acres.
- Robert C. Liuzzi, president and CEO, representing member-owners of CF Industries, Inc., an interregional agricultural fertilizer cooperative headquartered in Long Grove, Illinois.

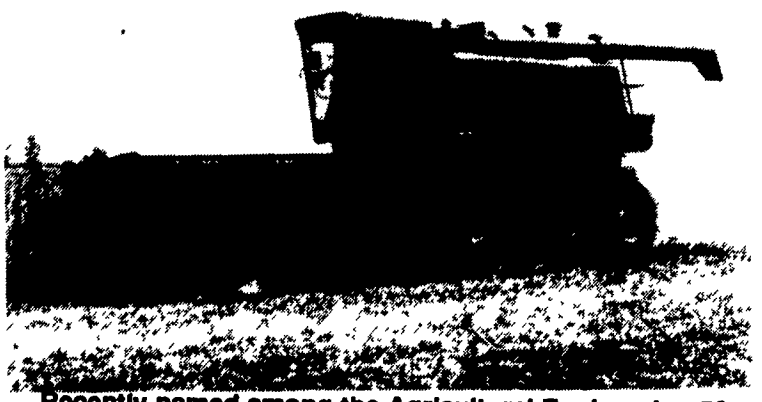
Noting that Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy is one of three Cabinet officials serving as ex officio members of the Forum, NCFC President Wayne Boutwell said, "We are pleased that the Secretary is committed to helping find solutions that will meet the dual test of addressing water quality challenges while permitting farmers to stay in business."

Sell Accepts Position

CURRYVILLE (Blair Co.) — H. Richard Sell recently accepted a position of account officer for PennWest Farm Credit, ACA (Agriculture Credit Association) in the Curryville office, according to Eastern Service Area Vice President Jay Chamberlin.

Sell has been with Farm Credit for 14 years beginning in credit and recently worked in records and tax service. He will provide on-farm service to the agricultural community in the Curryville area, developing loans and servicing customers with the financial products they need.

Prior to working for Farm Credit, Sell was a vocational agriculture teacher in Hollidaysburg. He was raised on a dairy farm and earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural education from Penn State University.



Recently named among the Agricultural Engineering 50 as one of 1993's most outstanding innovations, the Case International Cross Flow™ fan offers combine owners improved air distribution, reduced horsepower requirements, and less noise.

FORMALDEHYDE CAN AGAIN BE USED AS A DISINFECTANT IN PENNSYLVANIA

Dr. William D. Weaver, Jr.
Professor And Head
Dept. Of
Poultry Science

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the federal agency responsible for monitoring and controlling substances and compounds that may be harmful to human health, suspended the registration for the manufacture of formaldehyde for use in poultry applications in 1991.

Consequently, as stocks and inventories were depleted, companies that formulated formaldehyde for uses in hatcheries and poultry houses were unable to locate technical grade (stock) product.

The EPA's justification for removing formaldehyde from the market was based on its possible carcinogenic activity among humans.

Formaldehyde has been used for many years as a primary disinfectant in the poultry industry for the control of unwanted pathogens. It has the dual advantage of being both effective and inexpensive. During application, formaldehyde vaporizes, forming a gas which can thoroughly penetrate cracks and crevices.

Unlike formaldehyde, most commonly used disinfectants are applied as liquids and do not have the ability to penetrate surfaces, and thus are normally less effective.

Based on a request from the Pennsylvania poultry industry, the EPA granted a one-year emergency registration (Section 18) starting on December 29, 1993, for the manufacture and distribution of formaldehyde in the state. The emergency registration was granted based on the high levels of Salmonella enteritidis reported in Pennsylvania, and the ability of formaldehyde to efficiently control this microorganism.

The registration for Pennsylvania is specifically for use in hatcheries (no more than 10 fluid ounces per unit) and for the between-flock sanitation of poultry houses (no more than 2 fluid ounces per 100 cubic feet). Vineland Laboratories is the authorized supplier for the product.

Since formaldehyde is a possible carcinogen, EPA has placed some specific restrictions on its use. All commercial applicators must be certified by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in category 4 (agricultural animals) and/or category 20 (commodity and space fumigation) to apply formaldehyde under Section 18. Further, workers mixing, loading, and applying formaldehyde must wear chemical resistant protective clothing.

Treated areas must be ventilated for sufficient time to allow airborne levels of formaldehyde to be reduced below a level of .75 ppm before re-entry. (The airborne level of formaldehyde can be measured with several types of relatively inexpensive gas detection devices.) Applicators and workers entering buildings and incubators (setters and hatchers) after application should also wear chemical-resistant headgear. When the above precautions are followed, contact with formaldehyde will provide no risk to human health.

A most important requirement of EPA when granting the emergency public health exemption for the use of formaldehyde was that certain records must be kept by all users. Following are the records that all individuals are responsible for keeping when using formaldehyde:

1. Location of each application (address and specific site, for example, house #2 or hatcher #20, etc.).

2. Date and time of each application.

3. Total area treated for each application (cubic feet).

4. Total amount of formaldehyde used for each application (liquid units).

5. Any adverse or unexpected effects resulting from any applications.

6. Effectiveness of control from each application (plate counts derived from environmental monitoring, etc.).

Maintaining these records could be critical, especially if Pennsylvania would need to request an extension of the one-year emergency registration.

State Grange Testifies On Restructuring USDA

READING (Berks Co.) — The president of the Pennsylvania State Grange laid out a 10-point plan concerning Grange policy toward the restructuring of the United States Department of Agriculture at a recent hearing.

Gordon Hiller, president of the Pennsylvania State Grange, told Congressional members that the Grange believes food welfare programs, rural housing and other non-farm public service programs administered by USDA should be housed under one agency like the Department of Public Welfare.

"There is a great misconception in the non-agriculture community that farmers are the recipients of the big dollars which flow into and out of the USDA," Hiller said. "It would be more appropriate and cost-effective for all public assistance programs to be administered by one agency."

The Grange also supports co-located service centers to best serve farmers. The Grange advocates a 30-30-30 formula where a minimum of 30 farmers would not have to travel more than 30 miles or need more than 30 minutes' time to get to a service center.

"The farming community identified and influenced by farmland preservation, conservation activity and intensive operations," Hiller said, "should be given greater consideration for location than the government centers where they have traditionally been located."

The Grange would also like to see the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) converted to the National Resource Conservation Service, but that the function of the SCS should continue to be technical with priority given to farmers.

"The function of cost-sharing and commodity payments should continue from the designated staff of experienced people and programs as presently exist in the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service," Hiller said.

Hiller congratulated the committee for realizing that the USDA needed restructured to reduce government costs, increase the efficiency of operation and continue to provide the needed services to the agricultural community.

The hearing was one of eight being conducted by the U.S. House of Representatives' Agriculture Committee to gather public comments on restructuring the USDA under House Bill 3171.

Growers Need To Get Out In Fields Regularly If Using IPM

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Fruit growers have to be willing to take time to look carefully at their crops during the growing season and invest in the right equipment if they want to reduce pesticide applications through the use of integrated pest management (IPM).

That's the message delivered by industry representatives during two days of presentations, including a special IPM panel, last week at the Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference.

The conference was held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the horticultural societies of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Maryland.

IPM provides a method to use other non-pesticide methods of dealing with the ravages of insects and disease on fruit crops, including the use of traps and insects to control other insects.

According to Kiyo Moriuchi, pesticide manager with Moriuchi Farms, Moorestown, N.J., IPM has provided a way to deal with the increasing costs of pesticides in use on her orchards.

Moriuchi Farms grows about 184 acres of peaches and nectarines and about 78 acres of apples.

Peach pesticides now cost $10 an acre more than last year, and apple pesticides have soared to $50/acre more than last. With the use of IPM, Moriuchi Farms has been spending $207 per acre for apple pesticide use, "substantially less, almost half the cost" she said, than a standard pesticide program.

In 1992, through IPM, costs were about $140/acre for peaches, about $27/acre less than using standard pesticide control programs on her farm.

Some problems growers face is finding the time and people to apply IPM in the orchards. She said "have someone else do it," and mentioned that the New Jersey Cooperative Extension Service has provided the "practical service" needed to carry the programs out.

Dr. Don Heinicke, Cascade Foothills Orchards, Wenatchee, Wash., emphasized the importance of getting out in the orchards and taking a close look at the trees in order to determine what they need.

Dwight Mickey, who operates an orchard near Chambersburg, said he spends three hours every week in the field during growing season to examine the traps for insect control. With the help of the state cooperative extension service, he was able to feel confident about not spraying.

Also, he employs an extensive array of temperature monitoring devices and keeps careful records of factors such as humidity and temperature variants in order to implement IPM.

Paul McPherson, New Park, said he makes extensive use of weather monitoring systems available to growers to examine growing degree days and how they directly relate to insect pressure on crops.

McPherson said that computer technology is getting to the point where growers will be able to predict the weather down to a square kilometer. Expert system on computers will soon be able to tell growers what they should do in their IPM program.

Bashar Jarjour, Highland Orchards, Chambersburg, spoke about the importance of keeping careful records "of what I've seen and what I'm finding out," he said.

"We've saved 30 percent of spraying cost by using this method," he said. "It pays off."

Dr. Don Heinicke, Cascade Foothills Orchards, Wenatchee, Wash., emphasized the importance of getting out in the orchards and taking a close look at the trees in order to determine what they need.

His method, alert grower response (AGR), began as the result of some advice he gave to growers who were having a problem with trying to get branches to grow outward in rows.

Heinicke said growers are often caught up in the "information highway" from the industry press on what the "correct" method is for managing their orchards. Many of the writers are "sometimes not workers.

"We never return to the reality of our own orchard and what is going on around us every day," he said.

Growers have to realize the vast amount of changes that take place from planting the tree through to harvest.

He quoted a grower who, in 1816, had come to the conclusion that some of the best revelations die with the grower who made them. Those revelations should be part of the records that are kept.

Stoltzfus Spreaders have been known as unique, "top-of-the-line" ag spreaders since 1947.

Farmers are still using Stoltzfus Spreaders they've had 20 years or more. That means your investment in a versatile Stoltzfus Spreader will add up to a very smart buy indeed.

Certification Needs Should Be Addressed

SELINSGROVE (Snyder Co.) — Farmers wishing to have their farms certified by the Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA) should move quickly to qualify for the 1994 round of farm inspections, according to the president of the state's OCIA chapter No. 1.

The OCIA, with more than 1,700 certified organic farmers in a dozen countries, is the world's largest and best-known certifying organization. The association has two chapters in Pennsylvania, with about 40 farms certified in 1993.

Selinsgrove vegetable farmer Tom Beddard, head of chapter No. 1, which covers the eastern half of the state, said that while the OCIA's 1994 inspections will not occur until May, farmers should act now to get their paperwork in order.

"As public interest continues to grow in the areas of food safety and environmental protection, we're getting more and more inquiries from farmers about our organization," Beddard said.

"We welcome as members any farmers, or non-farmers as well, who are committed to the OCIA principles of farming without synthetic fertilizers and chemical pesticides and managing our soil in a caring way. On a day to day basis, farmers in Pennsylvania and other areas are demonstrating the wisdom of this approach."

A basic requirement for OCIA certification is that a farm, or the portion of it for which certification is sought, must have been without synthetic fertilizers and chemical pesticides for at least three years. Certified farms also must follow rigid standards governing the use of off-farm inputs and they must carry out approved soil improvement programs.

"The guiding principle of the OCIA is soil improvement," Beddard said. "Our chapter is eager to enroll farmers who are interested in moving their operations away from high-chemical usage. Once they have converted to a non-chemical approach they can become eligible for certification, which in turn will open their products to new markets."

Farmers in the eastern half of Pennsylvania who wish to learn more about the certification program and its costs should contact the chapter certification chairman, Preston Boop, Route 2, Box 168, Mifflinburg, PA 17844. The western Pennsylvania certification chairman is Breaden Young, RD 1, Box 540, Frombell, PA 16123.

Boop noted that all certification applications, complete with soil test results and other data, must be returned to his committee by early April to qualify for inspection and possible certification.

Boop said that no farm can be inspected for certification until field histories are verified and other pertinent information about each operation is reviewed by the chapter certification committees. Inspections are carried out by independent inspectors, usually from another state.

Webster Joins Progeny Test Program

DeFOREST, Wis. — Betty Webster, Jamestown, Pa., recently joined the American Breeders Service (ABS) progeny test (PT) program.

The PT program enables test herds, such as the Webster Jersey Farm, to use semen from young, unproven ABS sires. In return, these test herds provide ABS with information about the offspring from these young bulls.

After supplying ABS with this information, Webster will receive compensation for each ABS-PT calf born and for each ABS-PT daughter included on the sire's second USDA summary. This program is unique because test herds have the option to select specific young PT bulls they would like to sample.

The program's goal is to have each progeny-tested young sire graduate the program with a highly-reliable sire summary and give test herds the opportunity to use the most current genetics.

Since genetic evaluations rely on the data supplied by PT herds, ABS screens potential herds carefully before adding them to the program. The Webster herd was selected based on superior management practices, efficient record-keeping, and accurate animal identification.

Producers interested in more information about the ABS Progeny Test program should contact their local ABS representative or call (800) ABS-STUD.

Waybright Accepts Position

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Joel Waybright, who has accepted the position of membership chairperson for the second consecutive year of the Adams County Farmers' Association, has announced the membership kick-off campaign has begun.

The kick-off committee held its first meeting on December 29, with a breakfast/brunch at Spangler's Truck Stop. The purpose of the meeting was to gather as many members as possible in the remaining weeks of the campaign.

The Adams County Farmers' Association is a general farm organization with more than 890 farm families. It is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Bureau.

"Waybright will be the key person responsible for membership sign-up in our organization for the 1993-1994 year," said President Ed Wilkinson.

"The 1993-94 membership campaign has begun in good fashion and shows immense potential in reaching our goal," said membership chairperson Waybright.

Farmhand WingPackers break clods, level seedbeds...then gently firm the soil to reduce air pockets and seal in moisture.
Flat fold WingPackers range from 19' to 36' wide. Behind a disk harrow or field cultivator, they're an ideal final tool before planting. Behind a drill, they gently but firmly pack soil to increase seed-to-soil contact, improving germination for even field stands.

Check these high-performance features:
- All units fold flat to a safe transport width of 13'6".
- Single hydraulic control for transport and to raise/lower wings.
- Heavy-duty tubing and plate construction with 4"x6" tool bar
- Choose smooth 6-spoke rollers or crowfoot rollers for more aggressive action.

There's nothing more important to a crop than early, even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheel and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers. Grass seeding attachment for 16x7.

CONSERVATION TILLAGE SYSTEMS

Whether you are concerned about SOIL COMPACTION or RESIDUE MANAGEMENT

DMI

ECOLOTIL TILLAGE SYSTEMS Solve Your Problems!!!

DMI's Patented Point Makes The Difference

ECOLOTIL SYSTEMS

DMI SYSTEM	Min. HP Required
3 Shank Ecolotil	80
5 Shank Ecolotil	130
527 Ecolotiger	130
530 Ecolotiger	170
703 Ecolotiger	250

Each of these machines can be equipped to meet your particular needs. Your choices include shank style, shank arrangement, coulters/discs, rear levelers or point style.

Soil Compaction is a problem on every farm we've checked. Breaking up the compaction layer

1) decreases soil run-off in wet years, by permitting water to percolate into the subsoil

2) makes room for plant roots systems to seek and find moisture in dry years

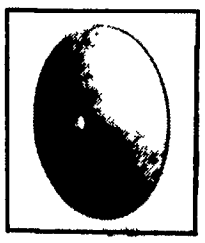
#1 CONSERVATION DISC In The EAST

Here's Three Reasons WHY They WORK On Eastern Farms — The Toughest Tillage Conditions In The U.S.

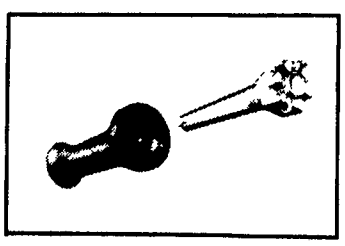
HEAVY-DUTY GANGS

Krause Invented The ROCK-FLEX BEARING SYSTEM.

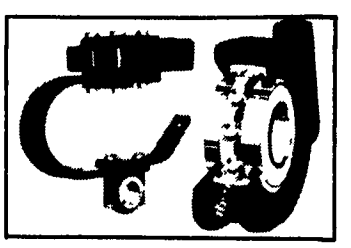
THE HEART OF THE GANG...



IMPACT RESISTANT DISC BLADES With 2.5" Concavity For CONSERVATION Residue Management



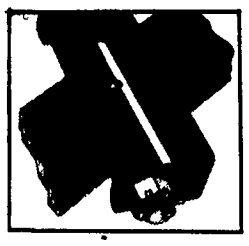
COLD-ROLLED Alloy Tie Rods With Nuts On Both Ends. DUCTILE IRON SPOOLS w/Machined Ends For Tight Fit



Regreasable BEARINGS Encased In RUBBER Inside A CAST-IRON Housing To Reduce Shock To The Bearings (2 YEAR BEARING WARRANTY)

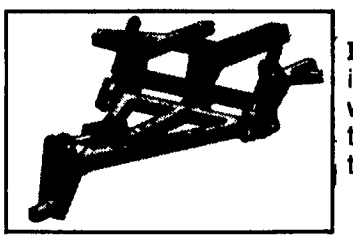
HEAVY-DUTY FRAME

Krause Invented The FLEX-WING System That LEVELS YOUR FIELDS...



Big 1½ "x15" wing hinge bolts in replaceable, hardened wear bushings. Grease zerk provided for lubrication. (4990 Series)

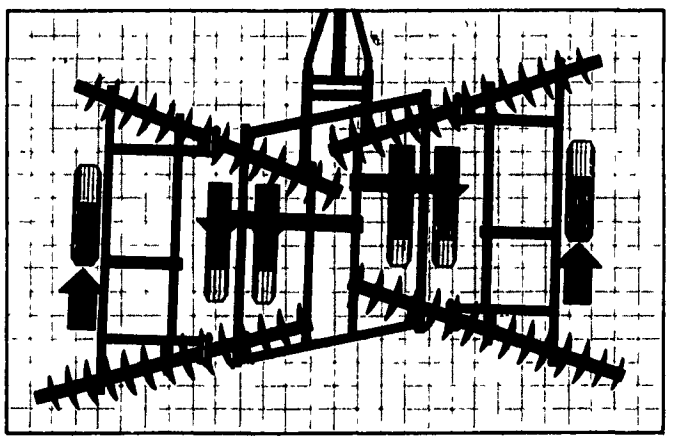
Super-strength frame with gang beams bolted to the underside of the frame for extra durability compared to integrated construction techniques where gangs are welded onto the frames.



Massive hitch is built for rugged field use, with a large 4"x4" steel center tube, and 2"x4" steel tube braces. (4900 Series)

UNIQUE WHEEL ARRANGEMENTS

(4900 Series)



This special wheel arrangement saves fuel by helping to prevent gouging.

In field position, the center wheels move backward as the wing wheels move forward — providing more uniform depth-gauging of front wing gangs. Heavy-duty, regreasable wheel hubs and big 10:00x15" 8-ply tires are standard equipment.

PERFORMANCE IN THE FIELD – Cutting, Finishing, Or Residue Management: KRAUSE DISCS CUT IT!

24 Hour On The Farm Tire Service

AGRICULTURAL RADIALS

KLEBER TIRE CORPORATION: A MICHELIN TIRE CORPORATION DIVISION!!
For years Kleber has been the European leader in agricultural radials, both in original equipment and replacement sales. Now, that same technology is avaialble in the East.

INTRODUCING A NEW FAMILY OF RADIAL FARM TIRES
A front/rear radial tire designed for heavy-high horse power tractors that can improve traction over 15%, while reducing soil compaction! Operating air pressure as low as 8 P.S.I. will dramatically boost your yields.

EXCLUSIVE BENEFITS BY DESIGN
What do we say when our customers ask us for the best farm tire we have? (After all, by now he has tried Goodyear, Firestone, Armstrong...). We have a new answer to that old question: Kleber (Pronounced Claybear) Here's why Kleber, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Michelin Tire Corporation has been making radial farm tires since 1952. In Europe (which is 85% radial), Kleber is number one and michelin is number two in both original equipment and replacement farm tires. The immediate benefits farmers will have are:
1 Tremendous traction-after all, Kleber is a minimum of 28% deeper in non-skid. For example, a Kleber 18.4R38 is 64/32nds vs. 51/32nds on any commodity radial made in the U.S.
2 The exclusively patented innerlug system accelerates cleanout, reduced downtime and supplements traction.
3. The unique carcass and belt configuration allows directional stability on the highway even with center hitch equipment. After all, Kleber is designed for road use. It is, in fact, speed rated at 25 mph.
4. And last, in addition to the normal benefits of radials, Kleber's wear is so extended that we have product on main tractor application with ten years of service in 8,000 hours.

WHY KLEBER RADIAL FARM TIRES?
- Lowest Cost per hour
- Highest traction - wet or dry
- Quietest highway transport
- Smoothest ride - no bounce
- Greatest fuel economy
- Most stable center hitch haul
- Lowest uniform soil compaction
- Fastest wet soil clean out

WHAT ARE THE UNIQUE FEATURES THAT MAKE KLEBER HEAD AND SHOULDER ABOVE THE COMPETITION?
- Dual angle bead configuration to insure no slip rim grip
- Bead/sidewall/belt package that provides on/off highway stability
- Non-stretch belts that reinforce the premium bar depth while protecting the radial carcass from field hazards
- Advanced R-1W bar depth to provide extra traction and low cost/hour usage
- Non-stretch belt/carcass design to minimize soil compaction, eliminate pressure spikes and provide uniform wear pattern
- Total design/build techniques to insure stable no bounce ride with center hitch equipment at 45 KPH
- Noise/vibration engineering to optimize bar contour/spacing
- Close technical ties to all tractor manufacturers in the Western World insuring compatibility
- Extensive front wheel assist OE/replacement knowledge world-wide
- In-house research - development staff

"I've owned planters with air metering systems since 1976. What's nice about the White planter is that I just go to the field with it and know it'll work perfect. Over the years, I've had consistent performance.

"Another of the things I really like about my White planter is how simple it is to operate. All the settings are easy to make.

"I looked at the Cyclo but thought the air metering system resulted in poor spacing. I get better yield with the even seed placement of the White.

"I've also heard of problems with the accuracy on the Deere vacuum planters. Some of the guys I've talked to, who have Deere planters, figure their old ones were better. With a White there's no talc. No mess. The White is a better value for the money.

"The 16-row forward fold model we have now is uncomplicated to use when compared to the way other planters fold. It doesn't have wings or couplers to connect before planting. The White planter makes it easy to go from the road to the field. It just takes one minute to fold.

"All this...simple operation, easy-to-set settings and uncomplicated folding...gives me more time for the dairy operation. And the accuracy gives me better yields which improves cash flow."

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

When Planning Your Forage Programs, Remember That Your Main Objective Is To Store The Plant And Remove It From Storage In As Good Condition As Possible. The Upright Silo Has Never Been Equalled In Its Ability To Do This.

On Most Dairy Farms, Forage Quality Is The Single Most Important Factor Relating To Profit.

Poured Concrete Silos Consistently Out-Perform All Other Methods Of Storing And Preserving The Total Digestible Nutrients In Forage Crops.

DAIRY TIPS

BY

DR. RANDY LYLE, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

WHAT ABOUT DRY COWS?

It still is common to see poor dry cow programs, or no dry cow program, on dairy farms. Common examples of poor programs are lack of adequate protein. Sometimes, energy is also lacking. Low mineral and vitamin fortification is also common.

Farms that have high incidence of fresh cow problems often have a poor dry cow program. Failure to provide a 60-day dry period, along with lack of proper nutrition, will result in lost milk production and increased metabolic problems. Body condition of dry cows can be a good indicator of whether management and nutrition is good or poor.

What do dry cows need to fresh in good shape? Start with the right forages. Don't overfeed silages (25-lb. corn silage per head per day is plenty). Feed all the hay they will eat. Grass hay is best. Hay quality must be good; the more hay they eat, the better. Don't use alfalfa, if possible. Supplement forages with grain, protein, vitamins and minerals, in amounts recommended by the Purina program. Provide clean water. Body condition score should be between 3.25 to 3.75 Trim hooves before or at dry off. Dry treat udders.

Ask Purina about their line of PREPARE DRY COW SUPPLEMENTS OR EASY CARE BLOCKS.

Vermeer RC7120 Pull-Type Mower/Conditioner

Take A Giant Step Forward To A Higher Level Of Cutting Performance & Operator Safety!

- 8 cutting discs — counter-rotating and synchronized — maximize cutting efficiency, minimize clogging. Each one is part of a modular cutter bar with adjustable flotation springs and 3-point suspension for smooth handling and exceptional flotation in different types of terrain and conditions.

- Reduced maintenance and wear. The entire cutting bed is powered by a single continuous through-drive shaft. Absorbs the shock and torture of rugged ground conditions. Significantly reduces mechanical failures common in multiple gear drive systems.

- Reversible, replaceable "austempered" knives. Break and shatter resistant.

- Long-life cutting heads, especially in hilly conditions! (A lot of other cutting heads are actually large flat gearboxes. When they operate on side slopes, lubricants drain to the lower end leaving drive gears on the elevated end starved for oil. Not the Vermeer 7120!)

- Smooth, chatter-free operating speeds (0-9mph) thru the entire range of cutting positions. Only mower/conditioner in its class able to cut offset or directly behind the tractor.

- Outstanding operator protection. Solid 1/8" rubber curtains (up to 250% thicker). Unmatched by any other competitor.

- Direct, gear-driven, long-wear conditioner rolls give you the power and dependability you expect. Adjustable roll spacing. Adjustable crimping pressure. Adjustable windrow widths (from 30" to 78"). Plus, the ability to hydraulically "power-out" plugged material right from your tractor seat.

7120 Mower/Conditioner

The most advanced design! The most dependable design! The simplest design!

And, easy to service! Each cutting disc is self-contained, pre-packed with its own set of gears, bearings, lubricant. Remove one hex nut and the end panel and, in seconds, you can slide both discs and spacer sections off for repair or replacement.

Four Tough, 3-Point Mounted Gator Mowers

- Rugged fields? Hard-to-cut crops? Wet, wiry or stringy hay? These are the tough, low-profile disc-style mowers designed to cut it ... in 7-, 8-, 9- and 10-foot cutting widths.
- Superior mowing element. Uses the same dependable, proven, low-maintenance cutter bar design as the Vermeer RC7120 Mower/Conditioner.
- Combination overhead bar/end panel construction creates extra strength and rigidity for the cutter bar, lets you cut closer to the fencerow.
- Superior operator protection! 1/8"-thick rubber curtains are up to 250% thicker than the cheap canvas and vinyl materials found on many other units.

Unique, pivoting hood provides operators extra protection over conventional curtain models ... and complete access to the cutting bed.

8020 Gator Mower

10-Foot Cutting Widths, Adjustable Cutting Heights.

505 Super I

5-Foot Diameters, 5-Foot Widths

504 Silage I Baler & Bale Wrapper

Only heavy-duty baler in the field designed, built and capable of handling the higher moistures and heavier bale weights of a silage baling program ... plus, the silage wrapper that seals it tight to feed it fresh.

Vermeer 605 & 604 "K" Series Balers

The New World Heavyweight Champions!

- Higher-Density Bales! More Bales Per Hour! That's right! Up to 30% more density than the others means fewer bales to tie, less wrapping time. Plus, Vermeer's exclusive bottom drive roller design creates an extra packing point. Also works like a pinch roller to produce more feeding action, sometimes allowing you to operate a full gear faster.
- Bales That Hold Their Shape And Feed Value! The more a bale breathes, the more it sags. And the more moisture it takes in from the ground. Combination pneumatic/hydraulic belt tension lets you pack them as tight as you want, from the core to the outside wrap.
- Greater Range In Both Density And Bale Size! Vary bale diameters from 3 to 6 feet! Vary bale densities to fit your feeding and handling needs!
- Clean, Streamlined Design With Wide Belts! Keep the leaves! Drop the traction belts! Vermeer's smooth, wide-belt design gives you more positive belt-to-bale contact (over 90%!) ... and less leaf loss.
- Smooth, Quiet-Operating Drive System! Heavy-duty double #60 drive chain! Constant velocity PTOs! Heavy-duty bearings! We challenge you to find a quieter operating baler!
- Faster Unloading! Less Wear On The PTO! Drop 'n Go ejection system lets you empty the chamber and start a new bale without disengaging and re-engaging the PTO. Less time and wear on the PTO drive system.
- Heavier, Better-Built Pickup! Less Plugging! No 4-bar pickup here! Heavier-built 5-bar pickups mean more feeding action. Rubber-mounted pickup teeth mean roughly 25% more spring in the tines.

605 K 6-Foot Diameters, 5-Foot Widths

5 Bar Pickup! Double Twine Tie! Hay Saver Wheels!
Variable Bale Size (3 to 6 Feet) & Density!
Wide Belt Design! Over 90% Belt To Bale Contact!
Automatic Bale Monitoring
... for Faster Easier Baling & Better Looking Bales

- Smoother, More Trouble-Free Twine-Tying! The new, improved double twine tie is simpler to adjust, easier to thread. And now you have six-ball storage and you're threading from both sides.

And Now Introducing ...The New Vermeer 604K
